The #1 Tasting Vodka In The World.

In 1998, the Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago conducted a blind taste test of more than 40 vodkas. They awarded points based on smoothness, nose, and most importantly, taste. Of all the vodkas, Grey Goose® Vodka emerged victorious, receiving 96 points out of a possible 100.

Founded in 1981, the Beverage Testing Institute conducts tests in a specially designed lab that minimizes external factors and maximizes panelists' concentration. The Institute selects judges based on their expertise, and its tasting and scoring procedures are widely praised as the best in the industry.

No matter what happens to estate tax laws, we can help make sure your estate is protected.

No one knows if Congress will make the estate tax repeal permanent or if estate tax laws will return in 2011. With so much uncertainty, it's a good time to talk with a Prudential financial professional. Working with your tax and legal advisors, we can help you create estate funding strategies that provide the flexibility you need now—and guidance for whatever situation develops in the years ahead.

How will an estate plan help pass on your wealth?

Protecting your assets for your heirs raises a lot of questions. Do you know what your total estate is worth? Which heirs will receive which assets? And what's the best way to protect it from estate taxes? Prudential can help you design the right strategies—and then review your needs periodically.

Portfolio
A generation-skipping trust can help transfer the portfolio to the grandchildren.
Home
A qualified personal residence trust helps transfer the family and vacation home to the children.
Marital Assets
A marital trust can help manage family assets.
Business
A buy-sell agreement can help make sure the business stays in the family.
Debt
An irrevocable life insurance trust can provide liquidity to the estate.

Now more than ever, flexibility matters. A Prudential financial professional can review your estate plan funding with you, on an ongoing basis, to make sure your plan is up-to-date and meets your needs.

However complex your situation, we have the right solutions for you. Passing on a business. Creating gifting strategies. Minimizing tax liability. Providing liquidity. Life insurance can be a powerful estate planning tool. You can count on us for guidance and a broad array of products to meet your needs.

Experience counts, especially in uncertain times. For over 125 years, Prudential has helped people preserve their assets through all kinds of markets. Let our professionals help you protect your estate and plan your wealth transfer together with your legal and tax advisors.

5 key benefits of estate planning

- Determine the assets your heirs receive—so it's not left for the courts to decide
- Minimize taxes
- Avoid probate
- Provide liquidity for your heirs
- Identify possible gifting strategies

Call today! Learn how you can maximize the amount of your estate that goes to your heirs.

Looking for a mortgage to suit your needs?

At The New York Mortgage Company, we deliver personalized service with one person in mind . . . You.

These days, it seems that most mortgage lenders are simply not willing to tailor a loan specifically for borrowers with unique needs. As a direct lender, NYMC can be as versatile as you need us to be, providing hundreds of highly flexible loan products and innovative programs designed to accommodate your needs.

What's more, we make the entire loan process easier, quicker and more convenient by eliminating the red tape and bureaucratic obstacles that are often associated with borrowing from a large bank. Among the many different kinds of loans you can choose from at NYMC are:

- Interest Only Loans
- Jumbo Loans
- Bridge Loans
- Construction Loans
- Refinance Loans
- True No Doc Loans

and a wide range of others.

We also offer the best available rates, with fast approvals.

Ask about our LIBOR Interest Only loan at 2.75% rate, 2.92% APR

ARM APRs may increase after consummation. Offer subject to credit approval.
Advertised rates are prevailing and are subject to change without notice.

Contact NYMC today, and discover why when it comes to your mortgage, we take things personally.

The Down Factory Store

Summer Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

Guaranteed LOWEST Down Prices in THE COUNTRY

PHONE ORDER DEPARTMENT
1(888) 414 - DOWN

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Spooning With Mars

Looking At The Red Planet From A Front Deck In East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

This is the week that Mars is closer to Earth than at any other time in recorded history. It can be seen, a bright red dot in the southern sky, the largest thing in the sky other than the sun and the moon, anytime the sun goes down. It doesn't rise or set, really, or not enough that you would notice. And this is because the Earth and Mars are traveling side by side now, at about one and a half million miles an hour through the cosmos. You can look out the driver's side window, so to speak, and see through the passenger side window of the planet that is streaking alongside.

I tried looking at Mars through a telescope at 4 in the morning the other night. It's a complicated story, why I was up at four in the morning, but I figured that with just a few lights on here on the East End at that hour — the Hess Station, the 7-Eleven, and that's about it — in that darkness Mars would be at its brightest and I would be able to see, well, maybe little men running around up there.

I couldn't find Mars through the telescope. This is an embarrassing thing to have to say. Mars is easy enough to see with the naked eye, so to be able to point a telescope at it should pose no problem. But with this one big chance this week that I could tell my kids about, that I had seen Mars at its closest since 57,537 BC and would not get a chance to see it again like this until 2287 AD, I'd blown it.

Having tried and failed at that hour, I turned the telescope at the moon. I'd try and see what I was doing wrong. I couldn't see the moon either. The telescope is now in the repair shop, and they say it will be ready to be picked up sometime next month.

We are hurtling through space like this, occasionally coming close to unexpected meteors zipping dangerously by, with no idea where we are going...

The reason why Mars is so close at this particular time and not at others is really very interesting. If you are having a particularly hard time about some petty matter here on Earth — you can't seem to get your driver's license renewed, for example — it is probably useful to know about how it all works with Mars and the rest of the planets. The Big Picture.

I'm not sure how fast the sun is hurtling through space, but as I said, the Earth is making its circle around the sun at what seems to me to be the pretty dangerous speed of about one and a half million miles an

You'll feel better, look better and live better.

Presenting the Water Perfection Systems from Tensui. The revolutionary systems that deliver the clearest, cleanest, most delicious and healthful water you and your family have ever experienced.

Developed in Japan, endorsed and used by the Ministry of Health, systems from Tensui are now available to East End residents and businesses.

Call 631.979.5180 for more information, and learn how they can change your life for the better. Tensui. Perfect water, for life.

How Tensui has changed these lives for the better:

"We cannot thank you enough for the extraordinary contribution the Tensui filter has made to our lives! Since the system was installed, we've enjoyed dramatic improvements in the quality of our skin and overall health. We love drinking the water and bathing in it."

Emma Walton Hamilton,
Bay Street Theater, Sag Harbor, NY

"I have been in the swimming pool business for over 20 years and I know a great deal about water filtration. The Tensui System is one of the most amazing systems I have ever encountered.

"We have put it in our house and our food and drinks taste better, our skin feels better and our houseplants are thriving. It is my pleasure to recommend the Tensui System to my family, friends and clients. It has made a huge difference in the quality of our lives."

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is geniunely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

Mars (continued from page 27)

hour. Mars, which orbits the sun a little farther out than we do, and which is the next planet out from ours, goes a little slower. And so, every once in a while, the Earth comes up behind Mars on the inside, honks its horn, and passes Mars on the right. That's what is going on right now.

And why, you may ask, is this night of August 27, the night when we are at our absolutely closest, different from all other nights? Because although the orbits around the sun of Earth and Mars and all the other planets are in the same two-dimensional plane, none of these orbits are exactly round. They are kind of a squashed round, or a very slight elliptical shape, and so on some of these occasions when Earth catches up to Mars and passes it, the two planets are closer to one another than at other times. Think of a car swerving slightly out of its lane. Well this, needless to say, is IT. Damn near touching. Just thirty four point six million miles separating us. From a cosmic point of view, a smidgeon.

I do know that this close pass with Mars, and the very closest is at 5:51 a.m. on August 27, is two days before the publication date of this newspaper and so by rights I really should have had this article in the paper last week to give you a true heads-up, but I forgot to do that and so I talked to an astronomer friend and he says the difference involved between August 27 and August 29 is maybe fifty feet, and so if you don't see it exactly at its farthest, you see it pretty damn close to exactly its farthest. And if you want to get the best view out here, you can still go to the Custer Institute Observatory in Southold on the North Fork and knock on the front door anytime on Saturday evening when they have a program.

In any case, the whole thing does give you pause. We are hurtling through space like this, occasionally coming close to unexpected meteors zipping dangerously by, with no idea where we are going, although some religious leaders say they have a roadmap. There is some pretty fair evidence that most or all of the nine planets circling our sun were once part of that star but at some point came loose and got hurled off into orbit. And a few of the planets may have started out as giant chunks of mindless space debris and got attracted into orbit around the sun by gravity as we all raced by. Hitchhikers.

There are the remains of what might have been a tenth planet that exploded circling the sun between Mars and Jupiter. It's a huge number of little asteroids that have spread out into their own orbit in a faint streak across the sky entirely around the sun. There is some debate about whether what we consider our farthest-away planet, Pluto, is really a planet and also whether two bodies of matter further out than Pluto circling the sun ought to be considered planets, too. Anyway it's pretty damn cold out there.

And finally, we have a theory that billions of years ago, all the planets and the sun and all the stars in the universe were just one tightly packed glop of stuff in the middle of nothing and one day it just exploded.

Well, enough about this. •

A Song About Montauk And The Hamptons From The Rolling Stones

By Dan Rattiner

One of the great rock and roll stories about the East End is how the Rolling Stones rented a house on the beach one summer in Montauk and wrote a song about that town. It wasn't much of a song, and the name Montauk is not in it, but the Memory Motel is. That motel is right smack on Main Street in the center of town. And that was the title of the song, which never went anywhere, but which appeared as cut six on the album "Black and Blue." This was in 1975.

"I really like Keith Richards," my mother said one morning at breakfast that year.

At this time, my mother was over sixty years old. I looked up from my omelet.

"How do you know Keith Richards?" I asked.

My mother and my dad still owned White's Drug and Department Store, the largest store in town. They'd been running it, seven days a week, for nearly twenty years by that time.

"Oh, he comes in all the time," my mother said. "And so do the rest of the Rolling Stones. They're in town this summer."

And that's how I learned about that.

The Rolling Stones were not staying at the Memory Motel and it was not a place they would ordinarily visit. Photographer Peter Beard, who lives in Montauk and was a friend of the Stones, took them there once after the band wrote the song about the Memory. The owners, two women, made disparaging remarks about the Rolling Stones being in their place and so the Stones left.

Where the Stones did stay was at Andy Warhol's oceanfront compound just south of the Indian Field Ranch between the center of town and the Montauk Lighthouse, writing songs and preparing for their next round-the-world tour. They frequented the Shagwong, Herb's Market and Gosman's. Probably they saw the name on the motel, MEMORY MOTEL, and thought it would be a good name for a song, even if, in the end, they really didn't quite pull it off.

"Hannah honey was a peachy kind of girl
Her eyes were hazel
And her nose was slightly curved
We spent a lonely night at the Memory Motel
It's on the ocean,
I guess you know it well
It took a starry night to steal my breath away
Down on the water front
Her hair all drenched in spray."

People who go to the bar at the Memory Motel today are told by the people who currently own it, and by the bartender and the waitresses, about the connection between the Memory Motel and the Rolling Stones. There are albums on the walls, guitars hanging from the ceilings, big reproductions of the logo the Rolling Stones made famous, which is of a mouth with a red tongue hanging out.

Dominating the bar, along one entire wall,

there is a map of the world, which appears to be the route of six of the Rolling Stones' world tours. This is a huge thing, about seven-feet long and four-feet high, and the continents are carved pieces of wood placed where they are supposed to be, with the countries painted in bright colors and the oceans clearly marked up with all the little islands. There is also a dotted line on this map, showing these six around-the-world tours, surely something the Rolling Stones did, with various stops marked with the names of the cities they were in. Seattle, Port Gamble, San Pedro, Kawasaki, Aden, Madras, Singapore, Boston, Galveston. Narvik, Norway. Narvick, Norway? Who knew?

There is something odd about this map, however (other than the fact that the wooden block of Ireland has been pried off with a screwdriver or something), and it is that the map has the look and feel of something that was made in the 1950s. Indeed, it WAS made in the 1950s. And the Rolling Stones, all of them, at that time, would have been about eleven years old. There is something else going on here.

Montauk went through a big motel building boom in the late 1940s and early 1950s. About sixty motels were built. And one of them was the Memory Motel.

Like all the other motels in town, the Memory catered to the working men of Long Island — this was the age when industry boomed on Long Island and elsewhere in America and blue collar people had two weeks vacation — and so Montauk grew, very suddenly at that time, as a beach resort for these men, their wives and their families. The fifties, as you know, was the age of families in America. Men worked. Women stayed at home. Families would get in their cars and, for the first time, go places. They would go to Montauk.

Nearly all of these motels in Montauk then were founded by families. Small numbers of help would be hired. But mostly, the owners would be schoolteachers with the summer off, or, in some cases, people with motels in the south in the wintertime or just people who felt they could make a go of it with just a resort in Montauk. Their sons and daughters changed the rooms and put out the chaise lounges every day.

But the Memory Motel was different. The history of the place, which I have only learned recently, is that a middle-aged couple with a large yacht and a fondness for Scotch had built the Memory in 1955. The motel part was one-story high, consisted of twenty-two units, and like all motels, you parked in front and went into your room directly from your car. The bar and restaurant part was two stories, with living quarters above, and stairs coming down to a small motel check-in area in the lobby. Along the wall, next to the bar, this couple had built this huge world map out of wood, which had on it dotted lines showing the routes they took traveling around the world during the years before. It was a wonder to behold.

The couple developed a serious drinking problem after a few years, however, and they sold the motel to two women, sisters named Sally and Esther.

Bars back then, just like today, catered to particular crowds. The Memory Motel, however, was somewhat different. It developed a disreputable reputation. Nobody said it openly, but it was a place to go where, in addition to

My Boats

Being One With Three Mile Harbor In Boats That Hardly Go

By Dan Rattiner

Here on the East End, where the bays, harbors, lakes, ponds and streams are so intermingled with the land, it is almost impossible not to have a boat. Here is a chronology of the boats I have owned over the years.

When I was nineteen years old, my parents gave me a sailboat. It was fifteen-feet long, had one sail, an iron centerboard and was made of wood. It was also kind of tubby. My parents told me it was a good boat to learn on.

We lived in Montauk at the time, and I got the boat in June when I returned home from my freshman year at college. I kept it tied to a metal post that had been driven into the bottom of Lake Montauk alongside the causeway to Star Island. You waded out, untied it, and waded in with it and climbed aboard. You raised the sail. I had taken a sailing lesson with it and learned the basics. Running before the wind, with the sail billowed out, it would heel over, one side just inches above the water and the other side high in the air and as it would attained its full speed, the iron centerboard would vibrate madly, making a loud humming sound, as the sail strained and the mast bent. It was Not Very Fast, though. Even at top speed, other sailboats, even those captained by little children, could scoot circles around it.

My mother tells of the time I took my little sister, age eleven, out in the boat in Lake Montauk on a relatively calm day to show her how to sail. I let the sail out and was instructing her on how to come about when I lost my grip and fell overboard. "What do I do?" my sister asked as the boat went around in little circles until I could swim over and climb back in.

When summer ended and I went back to college, I pulled the boat up onto the shore and just left it there on the banks of Lake Montauk. In early October, my mother sent me a photograph of it, shattered to smithereens by the telephone pole that was lying sideways across it. It was the hurricane, she said.

I mourned my sailboat, and no other boat came into my life for another fifteen years. Then, I came into possession of an enormous touring yacht. It was 54-feet long, was tied up in a slip in the marina where Riccardo's Restaurant is today in Three Mile Harbor, and was an antique, having been built for a wealthy yachtsman in 1931 by ACR (American Car and Foundry). It didn't go. Two huge long-stroke engines below the wheelhouse were rusted to frozen. But it made a good place to live for a summer. I had, besides the wheelhouse with all the levers and dials and wheels that didn't work, a galley, a crew's quarters, a dining salon with mahogany and leaded glass cabinets, a head, three guest rooms and a master stateroom. Also a sitting area under an awning at the stern.

> "Why is it," one girlfriend said one night after a few visits, "that every time I come on your boat I just feel like taking off all my clothes?"

It worked just fine, with the electric pumps in the engine room below going off and on periodically to continuously bail water out of the leaky hull. (Electric lines went to the outlet on the dock.) It was an absolutely perfect summer place for a young bachelor, which I was at the time.

"Why is it," one girlfriend said one night after a few visits, "that every time I come on your boat I just feel like taking off all my clothes?"

I had a wonderful summer living on this wreck of a boat. It had been towed to the marina from Connecticut. The brother of George Gallop (of Gallop Polls in Princeton), fell in love with it in Connecticut, decided to restore it, purchased it in its disheveled state, and towed it to this marina where his wife discovered what he had done. She forbade him to take it any further toward New Jersey. And so it stayed there, abandoned, in lieu of dockage fees owed. If I wanted it I could have it. All I had to do was pay the dockage fee. I decided to try it for the summer.

In the autumn, it got cold on the boat and I moved ashore. Oddly, a man called one day and said he wanted to take it off my hands. I directed him to the marina and a week later the boat was gone. I had no idea what he paid the marina owner for it.

The following year, the man who bought my boat paid a visit to my office. The boat had been towed to Red Bank, New Jersey, where it had been hauled. It would cost hundreds of thousands to restore but he would do it. "This ship was featured as the fold-out centerfold of Motorboating magazine in August of 1931," he told me. Then came the reason for his visit. "Where is the dinghy that came with it?" he asked.

I told him the truth, which was I had never seen any dinghy. Couldn't he get another? It seemed he could afford one.

"This was a very special dinghy," he said, apparently referring to the article in Motorboating magazine. "It's made of mahogany."

He all but accused me of hiding it from him, or having sold it for a vast sum. I told him again I had never seen any dingy and suggested maybe a bayman had come in possession of it, painted it white not knowing its value, and was just making good use of it. He left.

Two years later, I bought the house I live in now, which is directly across the street from where the boats sit in their boat slips, perpendicular to the road on Three Mile Harbor. I made inquiries. This was Town Marina, owned by the Township. I was a taxpayer. So I called them. Yes, they could get me a slip. But there was a waiting list. It was four years long.

"Put me on it," I told the town clerk.

For the next four years, I had a rowboat with a six-horsepower engine that I chugged around Three Mile Harbor in. I had noted that between Town Marina and Gardiner's Marina next door there was a sort of no man's land where half a dozen local men kept clammer boats in the water. I made inquiries. Nobody bothered them there. They'd wade out to them. Or they'd be on pulleys attached to stakes in the harbor bottom so you could pull the boats in hand-over-hand while standing on shore. Most of them were rowboats with six-horsepower engines on the back that during the day were out in the harbor being used for clamming. Nobody bothered the clammers there. So I decided to become a "clammer." Who would know? While waiting for my slip to come through, I would get in the rowboat with the motor on the back I had bought and with my wife and kids go out at sunset, chugging up the harbor to one of the half-dozen restaurants on the shore. The trip was slow going, about four knots. It would take a half hour, but we'd work up an appetite. We'd see the clammers sometimes coming in as we were going out. I always wondered what they thought of us.

One time, I tried motoring past all the restaurants up through the jetties and out into Gardiner's Bay. But it was too rough, I was underpowered and had to turn back. I was lucky to get home okay. Magellan never had such a problem.

After four years, I called the town clerk.

"Where am I on the list?" I asked. "My name

Other Gods

There Is God, And Then There Are All The Lesser Gods In The Universe

By Dan Rattiner

Parts of the Old Testament were written more than seven thousand years ago. We know this because, particularly in some of the earlier chapters, there are so many references to other gods of the day. None of them are mentioned by name. That, apparently, would give them more credit than they deserve. But they are referred to in phrases such as "thou shalt worship no other god before me," or "thou shalt worship no graven images." One of the Commandments even directs you not to pay any attention to these other gods.

The graven images they were referring to, in at least the part of the Bible when Moses leads the Jews out of Egypt, are the stone and marble statues that were carved — probably by Jews supervised by Egyptians with whips — as actual images of the gods of the Egyptian pantheon. The Egyptian civilization is more than six thousand years old.

Egyptian gods included Osiris and Isis, a brother and sister who were king and queen of the underworld and, shockingly, also consorts. Well, that makes sense. The symbol for Osiris was the bull. The symbol for Isis was the throne. There was Seth, the brother of Osiris, who was god of evil, trickery and chaos. (Symbol: the Pig.) There was Hathor, the goddess of motherhood and love (Symbol: the cow), who was the consort of Ra, (the hawk) who was sort of commander in chief of the Gods. Ra, unlike all the others, was self-created. He is where it all came from. The Sun. But then, with Hathor, he fathered Thoth, the God of the Moon, wisdom and writing, and he fathered Horus, who was God of the Earth.

> It was comforting to have all these gods... living their lives, going through the same soap opera as everybody else, except on some super high-up level.

I suppose it was comforting to have all these gods around, living their lives, going through the same soap opera as everybody else, except on some super high-up level. That the Egyptians would have enslaved a people who said no, there is only one God and he's so far up there, even higher than Ra and the other Gods, that we don't even get a chance to see what he looks like — well, that might be understandable.

Anyway, the believers in this one God — Yahweh is the pronunciation of what they called him from the Hebrew — held fast to their beliefs and broke their slavery chains and got away from the Egyptians in a series of very terrible and long, drawn out negotiations that included the death of the Egyptians' first born — and they were allowed to leave and so marched for forty years through the desert until they came to the holy land where they defeated a tribe known as the Philistines and set up a homeland for themselves there. They called it Israel for they were the Israelites.

That the idea of a whole pantheon of Gods was still a popular one can be seen by what happened in Greece. If the Egyptian civilization kept going for a few thousand years after the Jews left, a rival civilization developed across the Mediterranean Sea to the north at Greece. At this point you had the Egyptians on the south shore of the Mediterranean Sea, the Jews on the western shore and the Greeks in the north. The Greeks considered the one almighty God system, but chose to go the multi-god route. It seemed to work for the Egyptians.

In fact, the Greeks expanded on the system, even accounting for the language differences. For example, the Greek god Zeus is the "ruler of the gods" and might be compared to the Egyptian god Ra as "self-created God of the sun" with a few differences and improvements — there is no way the half dozen or so Egyptian gods even come close to the sheer numbers of Greek gods. Statues of Greek gods were just about everywhere in Greece and it was actually hard to go anywhere without bumping into one or another of them. Many of them still stand to this day.

There was Eros, God of Desire, Aphrodite, Goddess of Love, Neptune, God of the Sea, Ceres, Goddess of Grain, Hermes, God of Translators and Messenger of the aGods, Apollo, God of Healing, Poetry and Light, Ares, God of War, Artemis Goddess of the Moon, Dionysus, God of Wine, Fertility and Ecstasy, Athena, Goddess of Wisdom, Crafts and War (a title she shared with Ares), and Hades, the God of the Underworld. And there were dozens more.

The Greek civilization declined and in its place there rose up an even larger Roman civilization, also on the northern side of the Mediterranean, but further to the west. This time, though the Romans opted for the multi-god model, they decided there were simply too many gods in the old Greek civilization, and that maybe having so many helped bring the place down.

The Romans therefore eliminated a number of god slots, or at least consolidated their power into some of the other gods. The Greek God Pan, for example, who had been in charge of forests, flocks and shepherds, was eliminated. No new god was appointed to take over for Apollo, the God of Healing Poetry and Light. We're talking cutbacks here. A lot of pink slips.

As for the other gods, they continued along, but with Latin names rather than Greek ones. It is not clear to me, though it might be to someone who's made a deeper study of this, whether the new Roman gods had slightly different responsibilities and attributes than the Greek gods who had come before. Zeus, the Greek ruler of the gods, was now Jupiter, also the ruler of the gods. The God of War became Mars, the God of Fire Vulcan, not Hephaestus. Poseidon became Neptune. Artemis, the Goddes of the moon became Diana.

You might have noticed that the names of some of these Roman gods are the same as the names of the planets in our solar system. Venus, who replaced Aphrodite, for example, is the name of a planet. Neptune, who replaced Poseidon as the God of the Sea, is the name of a planet. The new messenger of the gods to replace Hermes, is Mercury, another planet

Crazy Laws

California, Dunehampton, Gambling Casinos and T-Shirts On Backwards

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes the laws are so dumb. Out in California, the law says that if you get 900,000 people to sign a petition, you can have a vote to decide to remove the governor. So 900,000 people signed on the dotted line and now there is a vote coming up. Do you or do you want to remove Governor Gray Davis who was elected just last year with six million votes? If you do, check from the list below of who you want for the new governor.

If the majority vote to remove, then the person with the most votes on the list is the new Governor. More than one-hundred people have signed up to be on this list, and they include an apple picker, a midget, a muscle man and a porn star. All any of them had to do was pay $3,500 to be considered and then get 65 signatures from any of the 25,000,000 people who live in California. Oh. And on the list is Governor Gray Davis himself, who figures if they vote to remove him, he could win his way back again. Go figure.

By the way, who names their kid Gray? And if you name a kid Gray, how would anybody figure he would grow up to be colorful enough to be the governor of California? No wonder they want to remove him.

Here in New York, we've got our own dumb laws. At the same time that people will vote to remove the Governor of California, the people with oceanfront homes along a six miles stretch of Southampton Township will be voting to decide if they want to secede from that Town. There's some argument about whether or not there are the minimum number of people in this community to form a village — you need 500 people — and they may just have 260 people. (260 IMPORTANT people you may be sure.) But if they do meet the minimum standard, which might require some of the people in the area to decide this is their primary residence instead of wherever it is up until now — anyway, if they do qualify and they hold the election and just three people show up to vote, all they need is for two of them to say yes. Bingo. A new village.

Here's a screwy Federal law. The United States extends from sea to shining sea. No exceptions. On the other hand, there are "reservations" where back in 1840 after we defeated the Indians we decided we would round them up and turn them loose. For the Indians on these reservations, we resolved to renounce any responsibility for their rehabilitation. And one way of doing this was to deny them citizenship in America. Now, a hundred and sixty years later, we decide that because they are foreigners living among us, people who over the 160 years have put together their own tribal governments on the reservation, we will allow them, and nobody else, to build hundred million dollar gambling casinos. Of course! That's the answer! One tribe, the Shinnecocks, say they'll put one in Hampton Bays. It's okay. It's the law.

Well, the arguments are going back and forth about all of these things. Can someone with a name like Gray be removed from office and then returned to office all on the same day? Can the Shinnecocks be an "official" tribe with all the rights and privileges of being "official" if the U. S. Government Department of Indian affairs has never given them that designation?

Perhaps the screwiest of all these conversations involves the attempt to make a new village out of

What If...

By Dan Rattiner

At a dinner on Saturday night, I had the opportunity to talk at some length with Ron Konecky, an attorney who has an oceanfront home in what will be, if approved, the Village of Dunehampton. He is a strong supporter of having a village.

His main points were, primarily, that the people along the ocean no longer trust those at the Southampton Town Board. "Why now? Why suddenly now they have to pass a new law about building at the beach?" he asked.

He pointed out that it was the Town

Board, not the beachfront owners, who had approved the oversized Rennert mansion now under construction. He said it was the Town Board, not the beachfront owners, who had approved a plan by a direct neighbor of his, Bill Rudin, to build a gigantic thirty-foot tall pile of sand and sandbags, together with, later, a steel sea wall, to keep the ocean away, a project that cost millions and was swept away in one night in a storm in January of 1998. He said that Fred Thiele, the longtime State Assemblyman from Sag Harbor who had once been the Southampton Town Supervisor, said at a meeting once that the Town should get out of the beachfront ordinance control business and leave it to the DEC because "the town doesn't know a damn thing about this." He also said that the oceanfront people are in favor of not having steel or stone on the beach, and feel they would be far better custodians of what happens there than the Town, which he says treats them as the enemy, does nothing to help them, and nobody has any faith in the town anymore.

These are powerful arguments.

What if the Town decided in the next week or two to rescind the new beachfront law and let the old one stand for the next few years? Is it possible that the Dunehampton proponents might hold off during these years? Would terrible things happen, done by the oceanfront owners, during this time? I don't think so. Perhaps the town, during this time, could meet with the oceanfront owners and come up with new plans. A lot of fences could be mended.

I think the idea of having a new village is rotten. Access to the beach for the non-oceanfront citizens of Southampton and East Hampton has been slowly closed off during the last fifty years. Among those access points remaining are the eight that are in the proposed village area. It is true that four of them belong to the Town and would remain, if the Village were formed, but the other four, under the jurisdiction of just 243 property owners, would likely be shut down to the town residents. There would be nothing to prevent them from not doing that and hey, it would increase property values for the 243.

If this keeps up, the 40,000 residents in Southampton and the 20,000 in East Hampton will be landlocked as far as car access to the beach is concerned. The South Fork will be a place of KEEP OUT and EXCLUSIVE signs. Is that how to solve the problem of bad relations between the Town and the oceanfront homeowners? Has it got anything to do with it? •

ATTENTION: DOMESTIC PARTNERS

It is an exciting and hopeful time for lesbian and gay couples: the Supreme Court held that the criminalization of private sexual conduct between same sex partners is illegal; many local governments provide for partner registration; and DirectTV is showing gay and lesbian movies on Pay Per View.

However, in New York Law attempts to control the destiny of gay and lesbian relationships in times of crisis such as sickness, disability, breakup and death by assuming choices with which you may not agree and denying important rights and powers to lifetime partners in favor of biological family members or even strangers.

This is the time to ask yourself who you want to make decisions about health care, finances, property rights, and inheritance should you be unable to do so. Take control of your future by executing legal documents to formalize your decisions, making your wishes known.

A Classic Tale

The Hampton Event That Was, Then Wasn't, Then Was Again, Then Wasn't...

By Susan Whitney Simm

"Historically memorable, a standard of excellence." So goes Webster's definition of the word classic. It is also a perfect description of the annual Hampton Classic Horse Show. This now legendary event is attended by the captains and kings of industry, Hollywood's elite, and sporting enthusiasts from around the country, if not the world.

There have been years, however, when this posh event wasn't so posh, especially when hurricanes whipped the tents to shreds and Ralph Lauren's pig disappeared. But more about that later.

The first time a horse show was formally organized in the Hamptons was around the turn of the twentieth century, when a one-day event was held on open fields, long since lost to mansions, on the shores of Southampton's Lake Agawam. The Horse Show at Southampton, as it was then billed, continued each summer until the outbreak of WWI.

In 1922, the show was revived when wealthy residents formed the Southampton Riding and Hunt Club in North Sea, which hosted the annual event through the depression until WWII, when the founder passed away into history and with him the club.

The show was again revived in 1952, although somewhat half-heartedly, and continued each year through 1958. But in 1959, a patron, in the form of Mrs. Morris Scott Wadley, brought life to the aging event and helped organize it as a fundraiser to benefit the Parrish Art Museum. This went on until 1964, when the show was abandoned again as interest in horses and riding declined.

> "We cooked on an old rusty Weber grill, and King Kullen was kind enough to let us shop by flashlight and calculator."

Another patron appeared in 1971, Mrs. Edwin M. Schwenk, who organized the show as a fundraiser for the Hampton Day School, which would turn out to be very significant in future years. The show, still a one-day local event, was held each summer at Bud and Tinka Topping's Horse Farm in Sagaponack through 1975. And one year, a young man named Anthony Hitchcock, a teacher at the Day School, was asked to announce the show. Tony knew little about horses. Neither did his fellow teacher and future wife, Jean Lindgren. But they would learn lots in the years to come.

"Jean had a crazy horse (literally) as a girl. It was called Rocky and he loved to kick cars," said Tony. "Her New City, N.Y. neighbors all had horseshoe-shaped dents in the side of their cars. Rocky had been saved from becoming food for a mink farm by her dad. I rode a tiny bit bareback on a farm nag up the street in Framingham, Mass., where I grew up. We were never trained riders and sure are not now! Anyway, I remember trying to announce classes whose names meant not a thing to me at that show. Tim Engel (Tinka's son) was whispering translations into my ear."

In 1976, East Hampton art patron and horsewoman Christophe de Menil suggested that the show be expanded from a local one-day to a grand five-day event that would include jumping and attract top horsemen from all over. Tinka Topping teamed up with gallery owner Elaine Benson, who was the show's director, and planned for the expansion.

The show was moved from Topping's Horse Farm to Dune Alpin in East Hampton (across Cove Hollow Road from the Red Horse Market). And in a nod to tradition, the event was re-christened the Southampton Horse Show, despite the East Hampton location. Hundreds of horses were trucked in from around the country. Devon Fredericks, daughter of real estate broker Tina Fredericks and a founder of the original Loaves & Fishes, was asked to prepare a grand feast, and Tony Hitchcock (that announcer) and Jean were asked to cater the "fast food." Nothing went as planned.

"Devon was to be the fancy tent caterer that first year, 1976," remembers Jean. "That was the year the hurricane blew the show down. We never did re-erect that tent, and Tony and I served food as 'fast' as possible, sans ice but with enough yellow jackets to house a field of hives. We cooked on an old rusty Weber grill (no electric, of course), and King Kullen was kind enough to let us shop by flashlight and calculator."

Despite the inauspicious start at the new locale, the show did go on in 1977. Southampton Hospital became the beneficiary, and the first Grand Prix – which totaled $10,000 (this year's is $150,000, one of the biggest in the country) – was won by the legendary Bernie Traurig.

In 1977, the Southampton Horse Show also became the Hampton Classic. The following year Elaine Benson called Tony and Jean at their Bridgehampton home and said, "Help!"

"After the 1977 show, Elaine asked us to officially become 'Local Coordinators' for the event and to help her handle the hospital work. The accounting department of the hospital told Elaine that they couldn't figure out how to put 'Manure Removal' in the Hospital Fiscal Year Report, or how to explain it to the State's Hospital Review Board, for that matter," said Tony. "So they concluded that the show needed to be a separate not-for-profit. Anne and Emily Aspinall and our mutual friend Ross Runnels bit the bullet and funded the initial startup of Hampton Classics, Ltd., a not-for-profit that managed the show for several years before being converted to a true charitable corporation in 1981."

One of the Tony and Jean's early contributions as "Local Coordinators" to the event was hand-screened T-shirts. They made these at home, usually on the kitchen table.

"Emily Aspinall and Nancy Seastrom manned the souvenir 'table,'" said Jean. "They would call our house in Bridgehampton when they ran low on T-shirts and my sister would drive them out, sometimes still wet with the screening ink." Twenty-five years later, Emily and Nancy are still in charge of the souvenirs.

In 1982, the Classic moved to its present location, where it has endured more hurricanes over the years. Severe weather has a funny

Joy Behar
Comedic Actress

By Dan Rattiner

I had lunch at Bobby Van's the other day with Joy Behar, one of the stars of the long running ABC show "The View." I suppose there are still a few people in the world who have not seen this show, which has run every weekday at 11 a.m. for the last five years, and for the benefit of those who haven't, I should tell you this is a program where five women, about ten years apart in age, are supposed to speak for their prospective age groups. The women include Barbara Walters, now 71, who thought up the idea for this program, Joy Behar, 59, Meredith Vieira, 49, and Star Jones, 41. They have guests. Everybody talks.

Behar is very funny and very in your face. She says what is on her mind, always, and she says that is the way it is supposed to be.

"The whole idea is unpredictability. I think that is what life is like anyway. Anyway, that is why people want to watch Survivor."

Behar grew up in Brooklyn. Her whole family is Italian.

"My grandfather on my father's side was a tool and dye maker from Calabria, which is south of Turin. Think Pittsburgh with better ravioli. He came to America in 1911 on a visit and decided he didn't want to go back to his wife and two children. His wife, my grandmother, wrote him 'Listen if you don't come to get us, I'm going to kill myself and the children.'"Very big drama queen, I have a feeling.

"My grandfather on my mother's side was a 'respected' man. I understand there were overtures for him to be a little bit on the sleazy side, but he wouldn't have anything to do with it. He was like a Don Corleone-type without the crime."

Joy is married and divorced and now living with a man who fits the category of significant other. She has a daughter, now grown, from her marriage.

"The one thing I learned that I want to impart to my daughter Eve," she says, "is that she is half-Jewish and half-Italian. I have a lovely family. There was no abuse, and there was nothing crazy. OK. There was a little crazy, but that's me."

Behar has a place in the Hamptons, in Sagaponack, which she bought in 1997 with the proceeds of the advance she got from her best selling book Joy Schtick.

"It's Sagaponack-North-of-the-Highway," she said, defensively, referring to the less expensive part of that community. "My favorite town out here is Sag Harbor, which is like New England, but you don't have to go to New England. I like the people in Sag Harbor, the artists, the writers, the locals. I don't go to these parties, the kind where you show up at the opening of an envelope. I like it here in the winter."

"I like... Sag Harbor, the artists, the writers, the locals. I don't go to these parties, the kind where you show up at the opening of an envelope."

Behar described a Christmas day she spent with her family out here a few years ago.

"We didn't have a tree," she said. "So I went out to get one. Not one thing was open. I went everywhere. Finally, I just went to a stand by the side of the road where they had Christmas trees, and I took one and left fifty dollars under a rock on the table. I hope they got it."

Behar went to Stony Brook University, graduating with a Masters degree in English education. She taught for awhile, and as a hobby tried stand up comedy. She was very good at it. Soon she was being booked at Caroline's and Catch a Rising Star. She left off teaching to try a career in television.

Her first TV show was in 1987.

"It was a variety show and it was on the Lifetime channel. Nobody was watching the Lifetime channel. But I had absolutely great writers. Larry David was one of them. Tom Leopold was one of them. And it was a great show. But the people in charge never gave it a chance. After the first year, they cancelled it. The people at the top can do that."

Behar worked for years as a comedy headliner. She was also in the movies. She had film appearances in Cookie with Peter Falk, This is My Life with Nora Ephron and Woody Allen's Manhattan Murder Mystery. She starred in "The Vagina Monologues," she's had her own HBO special, has been on "Jay Leno," "Larry King," "Live with Regis and Kelly" and "Letterman." Her awards include a CableACE Award, the Gracie Allen Tribute Award, and in 2001 she was chosen by TV Guide as a "Personality of the Year" nominee.

We talked for a little while about this and that. I thought a good thing to do would be to tell a comedian a joke.

"Tommy Smothers told me this," I told her. "He got it from George Gobel and said it was the sort of thing, with pauses and timing, that he admired in Gobel years ago. A man wakes up one morning to find that someone has stolen his bowling ball. He calls the police. They come by and have him fill out a report. Then they go down to the precinct for some questions. They ask him — can you describe the bowling ball? He says, well, it's round and heavy. Anything else? It's black. That's it? Well, it has three holes in it. The police officer writes this down. On the top or bottom? he asks."

"That doesn't fly today," Behar said. "Everybody has A.D.D. now."

"What's that?"

"Attention Deficit Disorder. George Gobel. Jack Benny. They wouldn't be appreciated today."

We talked politics.

"About Bush," she said, "Did he really do anything? He goes into Iraq. And it's like you put the feet in and the head sticks out. People are still scared. There's Libya, there's Syria. And there's the belief there is no homeland security."

I asked what she thought of Howard Dean.

"Not tough enough," she said. "There is the fear factor. We get up to the election, the Republicans pull another war."

I wondered if she thought that entertainers were being punished for expressing liberal views. It's been talked about.

"I don't think so," she said. "The Dixie Chicks are thriving. Al Franken is thriving. I heard his book is the number one bestseller on Amazon this week. During the war, when the troops were there, it made sense to get behind the President and we all did, except for a few. I think it was wrong. Bill Maher said inappropriate things on TV. Peter Arnett on CNN got canned for espousing the cause of the enemy."

Joy Behar looks exactly like what she is: an attractive, middle aged, funny human being. What I didn't know, at least at the start of the meal, was that she has lost 23 pounds in 11 weeks. She had ordered a salad with a certain light dressing on the side. They brought her a salad with a rich dressing already on it. She sent it back, but with a pained expression like — no matter what I do the world is making it hard for me to lose weight. (Well, it's true.) They returned almost immediately with another salad and an apology. There had been two salads on the counter. The waiter had picked up the wrong one. It could happen.

Joy is on a three-week vacation at her house. But it's turned out to be less vacation and more work.

"I did a commercial for Jenny Craig," she said — as in I lost 23 Pounds in 11 weeks.

And she's doing promotion for her comedy schtick at Guild Hall on Saturday night at 8 p.m. (August 30). She's done this twice before at Guild Hall and felt she couldn't say no. "My vacation is shot," she said.

Anyway, Joy Behar is very real, very in your face and very funny and you can go see her. And no apologies are necessary.

"What do you like to do on your vacation, such as it is?" I asked her.

"What I always do," she said. "I shop, eat, talk, and in this case swim in my pool. That's my life." •

Corporate Turnaround Expert

By Dan Rattiner

There are certain professions in which a calm demeanor, a sense of humor and nerves of steel serve you well. They include being a relief pitcher for a professional baseball team, a building contractor working toward a drop-dead deadline, and a corporate turnaround expert who steps into a large corporation to rescue it when it has spiraled into deep, deep trouble.

Marvin A. Davis is in the latter profession. He does not see companies into bankruptcy, or if he does, he sees it as his failure. He does not take over and chop them up into pieces and sell them off. He takes their temperature, issues a diagnosis, often standing next to a worried CEO, and fixes them. Then he rides off into the sunset. And that's what he does for a living.

I had breakfast in Water Mill at the Station Restaurant the other morning with him. Like many people, he came to his profession in a roundabout way. For example, if you looked at him in 1961 you would have found a young man with an engineering degree and a helmet supervising the launching of guided missiles at the U.S. Army's White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. He's had an interesting career.

Davis is a soft spoken, sometimes funny man in his mid-sixties. He's been married to the same woman for thirty-five years. He has a daughter who is a doctor and a son who is an attorney. He's been coming out to the Hamptons for twelve years.

"We'd been living in Westchester prior to this," he said. "My wife's sister had a house out in the Hamptons and we thought we would try it. People poo-pooed the idea. Said there was too much traffic. But after looking in Bermuda and in California, we settled on a house in Bridgehampton across from a horse farm. We attend charity events here, we play tennis, my wife Trudy is a trustee of the Art Barge, we love it out here. It has all the culture, all the great restaurants and all the sophistication you would find in New York City. And it also has beautiful scenery. Plus the people are fine, too."

You might think it odd, from the above, that the Davis' were looking at possible homes as far apart as Bermuda and California. As a matter of fact, Davis' home office is in Atlanta. But in his line of work — he says he can work on as many as three companies at one time, but that's about it — he travels around. His home could be anywhere.

Davis was born and raised in a two-family house in St. Louis. He and his parents lived upstairs, his grandma lived downstairs, a first generation immigrant from Poland. Other family members came from Russia and Austria. His father worked in a factory that made hospital equipment. His mother was a housewife. Both his parents were deaf mutes.

"I agree this was an unusual upbringing," he said. "But with family and with a lot of love, it worked."

Davis, a good student in high school, went to Washington University in St. Louis to study to be an engineer. He got his degree and joined the U. S. Naval Reserve where he was posted to White Sands for three years to work on guided missiles. On his return to St. Louis, he continued his education on a fellowship, getting a master's degree in business administration also at Washington University. He finished his studies in 1966. Over the next five years, he worked for large corporations, first at Standard Oil of San Francisco and then at Shell Oil in New York, where he was a product manager. One thing that came of this was his realization that as an engineer, his salary would be limited. The managers made out better. And he thought he could do that very well if the chance were to come up. Also during this time, he met Trudy, who would become his wife.

"I met Trudy at a Christmas party given by some nurses. I was living in New York and they had set me up on a blind date. Trudy was there to meet a doctor. My next date was with her."

Davis' chance to be a manager came with an offer from Pfizer to work in their finance division. In short order he rose to comptroller of that division. Then he became comptroller of a group. Toward the end of his stay there, which was five years, he managed the company's investments in Puerto Rico and became financially responsible for the restructuring of one of the company's divisions.

At this point, he thought what he really wanted to do as a long term goal was to run something of his own. He had been living in Manhattan when he worked for Pfizer. And now he accepted an offer from a legendary, some would say notorious, millionaire in the oil business named Jack Stanley. He would become Stanley's vice president at Goodhope Oil in Springfield, Massachusetts. Davis moved what was then his young family to Long Meadow, Massachusetts.

"Stanley owned gas drilling operations, a bunch of refineries. Working for him was quite an experience, not something that a lot of people could handle. But I learned from him. I learned that if you really want something and really work at it you can get it. Perseverance. I didn't like how he did things sometimes, but he got things it."

"Give me an example," I said.

"Well, we had a contract to provide oil to the City of Boston for its electric generating system. We made good gasoline and oil, which I knew we did because I oversaw that. What I didn't know one day was that Jack swapped some of my oil for some not so good oil — swapping oil was often done when it was the pipelines for delivery purposes — but this not so good oil blew out every light in the city of Boston. The city filed a lawsuit. I told Jack we had to get the oil we had swapped certified. He didn't care how long it would take to finally get it passed. It would, finally, he said, pass. And so we tested and tested all night long and we passed it and in the end, in court, it turned out that all Boston needed to do was reset its burners. Anyway, you get the idea."

I didn't know... that Jack swapped some of my oil for some not so good oil and this not so good oil blew out every light in the city of Boston.

Davis said that he once saw a bumper sticker about Stanley. It read WILL ROGERS NEVER MET JACK STANLEY. Davis was driven hard by Stanley. He had to work all the time. He almost never saw his family.

After two and a half years of this, and with all this experience under his belt, Davis landed the job of vice president at Sentry Insurance in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. What he was vice president of was all the divisions of the insurance company not related to insurance. He was to improve their performance if he could. Primarily an insurance company, Sentry didn't know how to run these other businesses.

"How did Sentry acquire all these other businesses?" I asked.

"They inherited them. A company would get into trouble, would be unable to pay its loans and Sentry would foreclose on it. They'd wind up owning the business."

Davis didn't know either how to run businesses that operated a commuter airlines, made wood windows, or stainless steel commercial kitchen equipment or beverage dispensing equipment. But he knew how to motivate people and he knew how to work hard. He also had a master's degree in business. And he had a master's degree in Jack Stanley.

"I became the president of one business, an advisor on two others. I found my way without ruffling feathers, and I went to work. After four years of this, and I don't want to pat myself on the back, but I had brought every one of the Sentry-owned businesses back to health and they were either sold for a profit or for sale to be sold for a profit. I had run out of things to fix. Then something really odd happened. The people at the main office of the insurance company became afraid of me. And so I was out of a job."

After a few months of unemployment, he was on the phone with one of his old classmates from college. Davis had graduated at the top of his class in the business program. This guy had graduated at the bottom. But he had graduated.

"I'll tell you something," his old classmate said. "You would be absolutely perfect for the turnaround business. Look what you've done."

The classmate suggested he talk to a man named Jerry Goldress, who was in that business in Dallas. Davis called. They talked.

"If you ever get to Dallas..." Goldress said.

"What are you doing tomorrow?" Davis asked.

And so began a partnership, in 1983, that has lasted until this day. At this point Marvin A. Davis is a managing partner of the firm, which is now based in Atlanta, and which is called Grisanti, Galef & Goldress I, LLC. There are seventeen partners working doing crisis management. And Davis has served as CEO, chairman, president and advisor to over 100 firms while working out their troubles. He is the gold standard in the business.

"The way it works is that a Chairman of the Board, or a Board of a big Corporation notices trouble. They call in the President and point it out. At first he denies it. It will pass. Its the economy. It's temporary. Then the house is in flames. He says, 'I think I ought to do something now.' And we get called up. We get dropped in with black parachutes.

"Basically a CEO has to trust us with the keys to his house. It is hard for him until he sees what we are about. My goal is to get the company back to health and to avoid bankruptcy, because bankruptcy is expensive. We work hard and fast. At the first stage we work 16 hours a day and set up a plan of action. During the second stage is we implement the plan. By the third stage we see how it is going and tinker with it. Then we are out of there.

"I tell my people we can only do three at a time, and they have to be working at different stages. Otherwise it gets confusing and we don't stay focused. We have had a very high percentage of success."

Davis has written books, has had books written about him, has made instructional tapes, and has had many magazine articles about him and his partners published.

I asked how he deals with what one would otherwise think is a very stressful job. He seemed very calm to me. Even witty.

"I have a very good sense of humor. I try never to get angry, but if I do have to get angry it is for effect only. If I get flustered, I'll take time off and regroup. I really do love it out here. The air here is wonderful and I'm very relaxed.

"But you know, I've reached to the age where I've seen a lot and so not a lot shakes me up anymore. But when you win, when you succeed, the thrill is like nothing else. You may never get thanked for it. But you know what happened and they know what happened. We are the emergency service for big businesses. And I'll tell you this, it's fun." •

Steve Tanger

President Tanger Factory Outlet Centers

By Joshua May

Steve Tanger is the president, chief operating officer and director of Tanger Factory Outlet Centers — and a southerner in Southampton. Granted, he's not a dyed-in-the-wool southerner, but the soft southern accent picked up during his childhood years spent in North Carolina still colors his speech and adds a pleasant roll to his deep voice and steady cadence. It's not necessarily the unhurried tone that you'd expect from the man at the helm of Tanger Factory Outlet Centers, which has expanded over the past twenty-two years to include thirty-three outlet centers in twenty states — including the Tanger Outlet Center in Riverhead. You'll find Tanger Outlets listed on the New York Stock Exchange and around the country, and you'll find Steve Tanger either in the city at his Midtown office or spending time with family and friends in Southampton.

The Tanger family has been in clothes — literally and professionally — for more than eighty years. In 1919 his grandfather, Moe Tanger, founded Tanger Creighton in Wallingford, Connecticut, and manufactured shirts for department stores and uniforms for the military. It was here that one of the world's first outlet centers was born in 1920, which was the Tanger employee store that inhabited a corner of the ground floor in the factory. It would be many years, a move to North Carolina, and then to New York before the Tanger Outlet empire would be built, but the first seed was planted many years ago.

In the years after the employee store was founded, Tanger Creighton grew and prospered. During World War II, the Company was a major supplier of uniforms for the military. Following the war in 1946, Stanley Tanger, Moe's son and Steve's father, joined the company, and a couple of years later Steve was born. Ten years passed, two younger sisters arrived in the family and then I-95 arrived — and it was going right through the Tanger Creighton factory in New Haven, CT. It was time to move.

At the time, North Carolina was looking to bring in new businesses and the company moved south when Steve was ten years old. After graduating from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Steve returned to the family business, which was soon sold, and promptly driven into the ground by the new owner, the National Student Marketing Corporation. National Student used "unbillable receivables" — a concocted financial term— to artificially inflate its value and when the practice was discovered, the company collapsed. At the age of twenty-three Steve joined the Board of Directors of the parent company in a bid to save his family's investment. He was successful, managing to cull the forty-nine businesses that comprised the National Student Marketing Corporation down to a profitable three and in the process gained a great deal of practical business experience. At the age of twenty-six, Steve was running the civilian division of the family company and he moved to New York. And it was then that he found the Hamptons.

"I think I had the distinction of having the smallest house, a 1,500 square-foot, two-bedroom, in the estate section."

"I've been coming out to the Hamptons for the better part of twenty-five years," says Tanger. "I started out in a classic group house in Bridgehampton and then in 1981 I decided to build a home in the estate section of Southampton. I think I had the distinction of having the smallest house, a 1,500 square-foot, two-bedroom, in the estate section. I was in the process of building the ultimate bachelor pad — then I met my wife," he says with a laugh.

At the time, Tanger owned a small investment banking firm and was putting together real estate and financial deals. A friend who was running for mayor of Providence asked if he could hold a fundraiser at the Southampton house and Tanger agreed. When he met with Debra Schuster, a Wellesley College graduate and a NYU business school student and the event organizer, Tanger found his bride. Seven weeks later they were engaged. A few months after that they were married. They recently celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary.

When National Student Marketing sold Tanger-Creighton to its employees in 1980, Steve left to run his own firm. At the same time his father, Stanley, became interested in developing a strip shopping center with factory outlet stores as tenants. In 1981, he opened Burlington Manufacturers Outlet Center, the country's first strip center built exclusively for factory outlet stores in Burlington, North Carolina. The venture was hugely successful and three years later the operation had expanded to 300,000 square feet. The course was set and the Tanger Factory Outlet Centers began to take shape.

In 1986 Steve joined his father's new company as its fourth employee and over the course of the next few years, they would open outlet centers in Kittery, Maine, Martinsburg, West Virginia, Manchester, Vermont, and a number of other locations around the country. Seven years later, in 1993, Merrill Lynch brought Tanger Factory Outlet Centers public and it became the first factory outlet center developer to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The Company's market capitalization at the initial public offering was approximately $100,000,000. A year later, Tanger Factory Outlet Centers was named the "Developer of the Year" by Value Retail News. The Company's current market capitalization is about $750,000,000, with the Tanger family still owning about 25% of the company. In April 1999, Warren Buffet announced that he purchased approximately 5% of the Company as his first investment in a REIT.

"In 2002 our stock was the number one performing REIT on the NYSE with a total return to investors of 62%," says Tanger. "Thus far this year, our return is 12 to 15%."

In 1994, the Tanger Factory Outlet Center was opened in Riverhead and is now one of the largest outlet centers in the world. "It's the beginning or the end of the Long Island Expressway, depending on how you look at it," says Tanger. "It's a regional shopping center, one of the top one or two outlet centers in the country, with more than 175 tenants, including Polo, The Pottery Barn, Coach, Saks, Barney's and many more. We have been named a tourist attraction by the State of New York because we attracted 13,000,000 shopping visits last year. When we developed the second phase of the property we also made a land donation to the Group for the South Fork to protect endangered salamanders." Steve sees tremendous potential for the area around Riverhead, and he expects that in years to come it will see a greater prosperity.

"When we first came to Riverhead it was the place to go to get your driver's license renewed or to pull a building permit and the Suffolk County government seat, but the area is expanding rapidly," says Tanger. "I would love to see it become the Napa Valley of the East Coast. There are world-class vineyards and outstanding golf courses that recently have been built. And as more attractions come to the area you'll see people interested in staying here for the weekend, rather than just the day to shop and go to the beach. That will bring bed and breakfasts and a host of other services that will really improve the area financially."

It is the natural beauty and the opportunities that the area offers that has made Tanger a fan of the Hamptons for so many years and what he sees as an attraction for future visitors. "There are the natural resources of the Hamptons and a small town friendliness that makes this place so special," he says. "There is as much culture and diversity as anyone could want if they choose to seek it out, especially for a community of this size. And there is so much to get involved in."

Tanger and his wife Debra are avid supporters of the Southampton Hospital, where he has been on the Board for the past six years. Tanger credits Peter Sullivan and Don Lockheim with saving the Hospital from financial ruin a couple of years ago. "We are fortunate to have the Hospital located in Southampton. I am privileged to serve on the Board with many dedicated volunteers, and to do our small part to help the Hospital achieve the financial resources to provide quality health care for the residents of Southampton," says Tanger. They also are active with the Southampton Fresh Air Home, and Southampton College. "The college has really expanded their cultural presence in recent years," says Tanger, "Bob Sillerman has done a fantastic job there. They now have world-class seminars, speakers and classes that are a great asset to the community."

In New York, Steve is a Vice Chairman of the Business Committee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Tanger has been awarded the Lifetime Excaliber Award by the American Cancer Society for his fund raising effort to find a cure for breast cancer. When Steve isn't busy with many charitable organizations, running his company or ringing the closing bell at the New York Stock Exchange — as he did on May 29th in celebration of Tanger Factory Outlet Centers' tenth anniversary as a publicly traded company on the NYSE — he likes to spend time with family and friends or on the golf course. The Tangers have two sons. Andrew, who will be an eighth grader at Horace Mann and is becoming an avid golfer and tennis player. Their older son, Schuster, will be a senior this year at Horace Mann and spent this summer in Boston doing stem cell research at Harvard.

"We like to entertain at home," says Tanger. Angling for an invite, I asked what they usually throw on the grill. "Hamburgers, hot dogs, steaks, corn on the cob, good old American food," replied Tanger with a laugh. "We like sharing quality time with good friends." •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #263

Ah-nult and Jo-el

I spent 17 years living in California. The southern half of the state is Hollywood liberal Democrat and the northern half is logging industry Republican. I predict Ahnult will win and do the state a lot of good. Anybody who can arrive in America speaking no English and with only $27 in his pocket and bootstrap his way to success gets my vote. I'm sending him my recommendation to break California into two separate states, North California and South California. It would be like North and South Dakota, only with people added.

With the precedent of celebrity governors set by California, New York can follow the trend, but do it better — because it's always better in New York. I'm waiting for Billy Joel to announce his candidacy for Governor of New York. Billy calls me on a regular basis for advice, and I have a great platform for him to run on.

First, it's really time for us to stop pretending that New York and Long Island are in anyway related to Upstate New York. They have cows, we have traffic. They have air, we have air that a person can see! Their big claim to fame is Niagara Falls — like this compares to Broadway — you can watch Niagara Falls on the Discovery Channel, spray your face with a mister and it's just like being there. Broadway must be experienced and it's ever changing. Go to Broadway, see a new show every time, go to Niagara, see water every time. I say, cut them loose and make them get a new name. They can be Algonquinia. We will keep the name New York because we have everything printed up that way and there's more of us than them. If they rebel, we'll cut off their highways at the choke points above the city and starve them into submission.

Next, Governor Joel can finally establish Peconic County by disbanding the notoriously corrupt Suffolk County Legislature that prevented Peconic County from becoming a reality. I believe Suffolk is the only county in the US to have it's own legislature. Why? Because it's much easier to organize deals and payoffs if everybody is in one building. Of course, I realize there are some honest politicians, the tooth fairy told me so.

So, once Governor Joel has cut Algonquinia loose and set up Peconic County, he can move to quality of life issues. First, there should be a Billy Joel, Paul Simon and Friends radio station so we can find decent music easily. Next, let the Shinnecock build that casino. Saves us all a trip to Atlantic City. Besides, if anybody deserves reparations, it's the Indians. Nothing will deliver reparations quicker and with no middleman, than a roulette wheel.

For East Enders, Governor Joel can build a beautiful scenic bridge from Orient Point to Montauk. That ends all crossover traffic for Shelter Island and links the forks with a spectacular drive over water. If they can link the Florida Keys, they can link the ends of Long Island. The Fork Union Bridge, would be a blessing for all the construction trucks trying to get from north to south quickly. The ferry guys could just tell them to take the FU.

For mid-islanders, Hizzoner could import fresh land from Antarctica and fill in the Great South Bay thereby joining Long Island and Fire Island. The expansion with greatly relieve mid-island urban congestion. The Great South Bay is too polluted now to be any good and nobody is using the land in Antarctica, I think it's excellent use of available resources. Of course the gay population on Fire Island would be distressed at the invasion of an aberrant lifestyle. Still, I think we can all learn to play nice.

Next, Hizzoner could bring in new industry. Olympia Beer just shut down its brewery in Olympia, Washington. All that beer has nowhere to go. We could give Long Island a brewery, bring in a lot of new jobs. All the customers are here. We could call it Long Island Ale, "the beer that will re-Orient your point."

Last, Governor Joel could rebuild the Twin Towers, taller and bigger than before. Why? Because we can...

I say, Vote for Billy Joel, Governor of the real New York !

Celebrating Hamptons Tradition

If you grew up spending summers in the Hamptons you might agree that attending certain events with family and friends becomes a summer tradition and The Hampton Classic is no exception. Yet the event is bittersweet for me, because it reminds me that the end of summer is near and fall is quickly approaching.

Nevertheless, The Hampton Classic 2003 kicked off its week of competition this past Sunday in style. With that said, it's only seems fitting that the queen of style herself, designer Donna Karan, played a major role in this year's opening day at The Hampton Classic. Donna had the honor of unveiling her late husband's last creation. Stephen Weiss was a sculptor and director of Donna Karan International. The piece is a magnificent, breathtaking bronze horse sculpture. The massive horse is nine feet tall and weighs in at over two tons.

Donna who was smiling proudly shared with me, "After Steven passed away, we asked each other, where would each of these pieces from his collection have its moment? And, we always said the Hampton Classic. The horse says everything about my husband, his strength, agility, masculinity, Steven's style."

Donna was surrounded with family and close friends including Bianca Jagger, who spent much of the day remembering and talking about Steven. Donna was in great spirits reminiscing, "Steven actually rode horses, but he was also an avid racer of motorcycles. He had horsepower, but a different kind of horsepower."

Donna's daughter, Gabby Karan, a busy new mommy, shared "I always played in his art studio as a child. Steven never liked to show his work, but I know he would have been thrilled to share this piece at the Classic." The Horse will be on display at the Classic, which lasts all this week through Sunday evening. See you at the Grand Prix.

As day turned into night, I moved onto celebrating another Hampton Classic. But, this event was invitation only. Nick & Toni's Restaurant in East Hampton celebrated fifteen years of serving Long Island, salsa style. Suggested donations of one hundred dollars per person benefitted three charities: East Hampton Community Council, The Children's Aid Society, and Incontinentia Pigmenti International Foundation. Over six hundred guests came out to support a Hampton tradition, including, Billy Joel, Isaac Mizrahi, Betsey Johnson, Chevy Chase, Alec Baldwin, Howard Stern, Jerry Della Femina, Ron Delsener, and Bob Balaban who all feasted on endless amounts of food, but more importantly honored the late Jeff Salaway. Jeff was the restaurant's co-founder and charismatic guiding light, who was tragically killed in a car crash on August 31, 2001. General Manager, Mark Smith, Jeff's sister Liz, and Jeff's wife and should be about coming up."

"Let me see," she said. "Hmmmm. I don't see your name here. You're not on the list."

I went nuts.

"Okay, you're next," the town clerk said. And I was.

The getting of my slip coincided with the Town and Gardiner's Marinas getting together and deciding to evict the squatter clammers from the little spot between the two marinas. It was a lousy thing to do to them, is what I thought.

And so, I sold my boat and bought, for my new slip, the most wonderful boat I had owned until that time. It was sixteen-feet long, had a cockpit with upholstered seats in it, a wraparound windshield and steering wheel. It had a dashboard with a button you pushed to start this 55-horsepower Evinrude engine. A button you pushed! Imagine that! It had never occurred to me you could start an outboard any other way than pulling on a rope.

The man who sold this fiberglass boat to me also showed me how you could buy an electric pump, the kind you get in a hardware store and put down in your basement that sucks up the water after you plug it in, to keep the boat dry. No more using those manual pumps that you pushed and pulled up and down! No more taking water out of the boat by bailing with a bucket! All you had to do was plug it in at the electric outlet on the shore. Who knew?

I paid $600 for this boat and engine. The boat was 25 years old, made in 1960, which was only the second or third year they had fiberglass. It weighed a ton, with fiberglass close to a foot thick since nobody knew quite yet how thick you should make it. The engine was 12 years old and had three cylinders. Evinrude had made three cylinder engines for only two years, then abandoned the idea. But it ran. And you could take it out and run it around the harbor at about 35 miles an hour and the kids could water ski out the back.

This was in 1986, as the old Soviet Union was winding down. I named my boat Perestroika, which was the Russian word for openness that Michel Gorbachev was espousing at the time, and I put the hammer and sickle red flag on the stern. Everything was falling apart over there. My boat was falling apart. The stuffing in the seat was coming out. The windshield was cracked. The paint was peeling. Once, sitting with my kids high up on the deck at East Hampton Point overlooking the boats tied up at the dock there, I asked my kids which boat there was the scruffiest and rattiest. OURS they shouted happily.

After the Soviet Union collapsed — this was four years later and I still had the boat — I told people I took out on the boat that this was the last vessel in the Soviet Navy. Certainly it looked it.

How I came to sell this boat — for $100 — is a sad tale. A friend, who is a prominent painter with a studio in the Springs, told me my boat looked awful and he had a much newer boat he would sell me at a bargain price. It was on a trailer on his front lawn. I went to look. It was almost brand new, was made of aluminum and had Styrofoam flotation in the hull (which mine didn't), had an almost brand new engine and high swivel seats, sort of like bar stools. Other than that it was very similar to Perestroika. It was worth $4,000. A buyer had given it to him in trade for a painting. He'd sell it to me for $1,000. And so, I sold Perestroika for $100 and put this new boat in the water.

Turned out my new boat was indeed worth $4,000, but mostly it would be worth that on a river. It was a fly caster's fishing boat. You sat on the stools and looked down and could see the fish. Its flat bottom, which would be just fine on a stream in Mississippi, was totally unsuitable in the choppy waters of Three Mile Harbor and Gardiner's Bay. I took it out once. Never used it again.

The next year I bought, for $3,500, a wonderful and comfortable 24-foot inboard pleasure boat. It was a 1977 Carver, old and beat up but in my price range, and it had a barbecue on the stern, a flying bridge you could get to by ladder up above, a curtained cabin with a galley, dining table, head and shower and a V-bunk in the bow where you could sleep. Someone — this was very 1977 — had done the entire little V bedroom in shag. There was also an 8-track player in there.

I loved this boat. It was a big tub, designed for parties and fun and we did much of that, mostly anchored right in Three Mile Harbor. Because it was old and certain things on it did not work — the depth finder, for example, and the gas gauge — and several times the engine made clanking noises, which made me bring it into the marina for about $1200 in rod or piston repairs — I was not happy to take it out very far for fear of it breaking down. Just out the jetty into the bay a few hundred yards was about it. And once to Sag Harbor and back. Either going or returning, I forget which, we crashed through a four-foot chop. I never knew a four-foot chop could be so bumpy. The water sprayed everywhere. I got seasick.

Up on the flying bridge, the boat had a "fume

Vietnam-based play Penang was knocked off stage at Guild Hall last Thursday by the big blackout. Ironically, Larocca was just being sworn in as New York State's first Secretary of Energy by Governor Hugh Carey when the lights went off back in 1977, so he is no stranger to ill-timed power failures. Larocca was philosophical about last week's cancellation: "Hey, I'm in great company," he said. "Broadway was dark too!" Penang will be rescheduled.

way of bringing people together, and the people and horses that have long been a part of this event have been no exception. Jean remembers these moments fondly (and safely, from a distance).

"I remember seeing Agneta Currey, the chair of our show and the reason primarily that it looks sooo elegant, and Tinka Topping the founding board member, both elegant, lovely woman, out knee-deep in mud by the stables – with shovels – making channels to move the water away from the horse stalls during one of our endless monsoons..."

"Who could forget the string of bad weather that has plagued us?" added Tony. "But hey...it IS Labor Day weekend and it IS hurricane season!"

VIP tables, so sought after today, were a pretty "hard sell" in the old days, remembers Jean. "We used to hold a cocktail party at the Weinstein's in East Hampton, to beg people to buy tables," said Tony. "Now they beg us. Or at the very least, the tables sell out every year long before we open our gates."

The 1980s saw the show evolve fairly quickly into what it has become today, a world class event. But the show also saw its share of good times and near misses.

In 1984, the Olympic show jumping riders of the U.S. Equestrian Team arrived fresh from their gold medal win in Los Angeles, and two of the team members were local heroes. In 1989, riders Michael Matz and D.D. Alexander survived a plane crash just a week before the show. They rode well anyway. Another year, Jean Lindgren was the butt of a practical joke played by Bud Topping. She remembers the moment clearly.

"When Jane Holzer donated the pig for the Ralph Lauren Fashion Show and Pig Roast, Bud told me Mr. McFarland, the pig roaster, had called and said the pig shrank to nothing. I had 500 guests arriving in an hour. So I did what any sane person would do, threw myself on the ground and sobbed. Of course, Bud was just kidding."

Not surprisingly, the Classic has brought people together in many ways over the years. Today, Tony and Jean are co-executive directors of the event, and the Toppings have become Tony's and Jean's best friends in the Hamptons, the dedication to the show uniting them as it has the many others who have come to be associated with it.

But there have been many changes along the way, of course. I asked Tony what he thinks is the biggest change of all. "I would have to say contained growth, and the happiest change is the development of our staff over the years. We used to do almost everything ourselves...now we have the greatest staff in the world, many of whom started with us as children, and we both love and trust them.

"But the most satisfying challenge has been proving that an equestrian event can reach out to the entire community. From rich to poor, from black to white, from Latino to Asian, to all. This is not an event for the 'elite.' It is for everyone."

Memory (continued from page 60)

the tourists, there were certain rooms that could be rented by the hour. Personally, of course, as a teenager and the son of the owner of a drug store, I knew nothing about this. What I did know was that you didn't go to the Memory Motel. My fantasy was that the two women were gay. How could I have known they were sisters? What was perfectly obvious, however, was that Sally, the blonder of the two, often lay out front of the motel, right in the parking lot on a chaise lounge, lathered with suntan lotion and wearing only a leopard print bikini. I went into the Memory during the next ten years only once — to try to sell them advertising in the newspaper, which they did not want — and I did marvel at the map on the wall. I thought the map was THEIR world tour. On an ocean liner. What a good place for two women to hang out and not be noticed. (Remember, people were in the closet back then.)

The two women, Sally and Esther, ran the Memory Motel all their lives. And when they got old, there was a report in the newspaper that they had filed a lawsuit against the Rolling Stones for using the name of their motel without sharing in the royalties. The suit, I believe, went nowhere, and, I think, the ladies can be forgiven for this. Old and ill, life can be a tough thing.

Around 1985, the Memory Motel was sold to two younger women, nice people, who ran it for the next fifteen years as a regular motel. Two years ago, it was sold to Arthur Schneider who has duded up the bar a bit and made it something of a tourist attraction and shrine to the Rolling Stones' time in Montauk. It's a working bar, though, and a pretty hip place to go today.

The Rolling Stones spent just that one summer in Montauk. They were already famous rock stars by then and had wanted to be by themselves that year and the people in the town respected that.

Keith Richards came back to visit my mother a year later when he was in town. He'd probably remember her today. Though my dad passed away five years ago, she continues on in retirement, living in Palm Aire in Pompano Beach, Florida. She has many friends and at the age of ninety, still plays golf two or three days a week. •

The fact is that the planets were discovered during the Roman era, and they were, for the most part, given away as gifts by Jupiter, the God of Gods, to all the lesser gods, though Jupiter kept the biggest planet for himself. At least, that is how the story goes. As you may know, the view of things at that particular time was that the Earth was the center of the universe and everything revolved around it. So it was no big deal to give a planet to a god, one here and one there.

Through all this, the Jews kept plugging away with their idea that there was only one God and that's all there was. It was not a particularly popular idea for a long time and it didn't take hold. So there were a lot more people around who believed in this whole pantheon of gods than there were people believing in one god, and so when the Jews squared off against the Carthaginians, or the Persians or the Romans, or even the Philistines, there were a whole lot more of the other people than there were of the Israelites. I can't tell you how many times the Jewish temple in Jerusalem got sacked. I think it was maybe ten times.

Finally, there was this whole dramatic business of Jesus who said he was the son of God and who others also said was the son of God. From the Roman's point of view, it might have looked as if the Jews were finally coming around to the whole idea of a houseful of Gods. They had two. One had fathered the other. Maybe there would be more.

There weren't. There were instead the twelve apostles, attesting to the miracles that Jesus performed, and there was the last supper and the betrayal and the death on the cross and the promise of a future in which the dead would rise from their graves.

Today, two thousand years later, the idea of Jesus and his father, the one true God, has swept through western civilization, converting one group of people after another to their way of thinking — even converting the Vikings, who around 700 a. d. developed a small pantheon of Gods in what is today Norway, Finland and Sweden. These gods were Njord, the god of the wind and the sea, and wealth and prosperity. Also Tyr, God of Justice and War, and Freya, Goddess of Fertility, Birth and the Crops — you can see the gods were taking on several jobs here — all overseen by Thor, Champion of the gods and God of Lightning, Thunder and Rain, and by Odin, God of War, Death, Poetry, Wisdom and Magic.

Sometimes I wonder how a particular Norse god might be expected to have talent in such diverse fields as war, poetry and wisdom, but as I said, they didn't choose to have a lot of gods.

And so, today Christianity is triumphant in much of the world. There are several billion adherents to Christianity, and another one billion adherents to Islam, which believes in the same God as the Christians and Jews, but interpreted by an Arab prophet named Muhammad who lived around 700 ad. (And only about ten million Jews — but that's another story.)

I wonder if there might be some place where all these old gods who didn't make it might be hanging out. Bacchus could be having a few drinks with Thor. Poseidon and Neptune could be comparing notes. Ra could be telling stories of the good old days in Egypt. These gods do live forever, you know. • a collection of oceanfront mansions that have nothing whatsoever in common other than the fact that they are oceanfront mansions and they are not pleased with a new town law recently passed concerning beach erosion. There is no downtown. No single road connects these houses, so to drive around the village you have to drive out of the Village in one place and back into it in another place. Of the 243 tax bills that are sent out by the Town to these oceanfront mansions, which extend from the East Hampton Town line in Sagaponack to the Southampton Village line in Wickapogue, 183 of them are forwarded to somewhere else. So there really are just 60 property owners who are here year around, at least if you consider where they open their mail. (Though maybe they are here year around but they employ official letter openers to take care of their mail elsewhere.) But if they make themselves into a Village, something which will be at vast expense to them, they won't have to obey this new town beach erosion law. They can make their own beach erosion law. And that's what it's about.

A meeting was held on Tuesday August 19, overseen by the Town Supervisor, who had called it in order to get public comment on the petition these oceanfront residents had presented the Town. I think only 100 people have to sign the petition to get it put on a ballot for a vote. (Remember if three people vote and two vote yes, it's done.) But the petition has to list the names and addresses of the 500 people who live in the proposed new village who would be eligible to vote on it. Maybe, by accident, there might be people put on this list who do not reside there. Or if the proponents of the formation of the new Village were a bit shady, there might, deliberately, be names on there that don't belong there. The Town Supervisor would decide. He wanted public opinion.

At this meeting, two people got up to say they did not live in the proposed village and they had no idea how their names got on that list. There was one address —keep in mind this is entirely a residential area — where the names of forty individuals were listed as residents. Apparently, every relative, every friend and every weekend guest who ever showed up there got on the list. Even the UPS man who somebody remembered once made a delivery there showed up on the list.

Well, it's of no consequence. The Town Supervisor can reject this list and announce that it is damned to hell, but the proponents of the new village cite another law which says they can simply present him a new list for further consideration later on. There will be another meeting at which the Supervisor will accept further comment and this will take place on September 3.

There are so many other screwy State of New York laws on the books in connection with the creation of this new Village. If there were a law saying everybody who lives there had to jump seven feet through a hoop, people would be jumping seven feet through a hoop. And nobody would think anything of it. What is the matter with everybody?

For example, the State law says that someone is a resident of a place if they vote there. So the 500 people have to be over 18, the minimum voting age, and they have to vote there. But as I said, many of these rich oceanfront people have numerous houses in such slums as Palm Beach, Aspen, St. Tropez, New York City and Darien. Which one is where they vote? You can only choose one. After all, this is America where you have one man one vote. All have chosen somewhere and it's not necessarily in Southampton.

The qualification for having enough residents for a village says if there aren't quite 500 but there are new people moving in all the time, a new person moving here could change his voting address to here and then after one year, but not before, be considered a full resident of this place. Apparently this hurdle was designed to prevent drifters from just moving in one day, voting, and moving out.

And so now, the proponents of this new village are racing around trying to persuade people to change their permanent resident status from, say, New York City, to out here, but just for one year, after which you can move it back.

Seems that after the village is formed, there's a whole different set of laws to follow to dismantle a village. So all that has to happen is for the proponents to get their chin above the bar for just a minute. After which it can settle back down to being a place with just about 64 people opening their mail here.

Forgetting all this lunacy for a moment, it is interesting to see why all these oceanfront people would want to form a Village in the first place. Well, as I said, they are pissed off about a new law. They say this new law could prevent them from rebuilding their beachfront houses in the event they were washed into the sea. And they say if they take matters into their own hands, they can have laws that will ALLOW them to rebuild their homes if they fall into the sea. The people in Southampton Town government say these oceanfront people have not read the new law right. They say that for the first time, the residents will be guaranteed the right to rebuild their houses if they are washed into the sea. They say that up until now, the DEC, a Federal organization, had the right to prevent a person from rebuilding a house that fell into the sea. But now for the first time, Southampton Town had been granted an exemption to this rule and in fact is the only Town in the state to have gotten this exemption. If the new village is formed, they say, the new village residents will LOSE the right to rebuild their houses should they fall into the sea. There is a communications problem here. Although both sides agree that the new law does have provisions that would prevent residents from building huge steel walls and other "hard" structures in front of their houses. The public has the right to access the beach in this State after all.

Also, such structures, when built, would absolutely destroy the oceanfront ecology of this place, probably decimating all sorts of shorefront endangered species.

(One can hear the response from the homeowners. "If we want any endangered species on our beaches, we'll buy them.")

A few comparisons are interesting.

One involves the New York State requirement for the formation of a new county. The requirement for a new county is that there be more than 110,000 residents living in the area. They define a resident as somebody that the national census says lives here.

Some years ago, an effort was made to form a new county out of the five eastern towns. The effort is still there. It waxes and wanes. But back then, the census only had 98,000 residents in the five towns. So this newspaper suggested that all enthusiastic proponents of the county get out there and make babies.

With the new Village requirement, you'd have to make babies and then wait 18 years until they were old enough to vote. This would require tremendous patience. And who would say if the house wouldn't fall into the sea in the interim, and then, since Southampton Town law would still apply, either be allowed to be rebuilt or not allowed to be rebuilt, according to whom you believe.

As for the laws that are on the books for the simple act of changing the name of an unincorporated hamlet in the Township, not an official village, there are still other laws. Back at the turn of the twentieth century, a group of summer people living in Shinnecock (not on the reservation) got together at one of the two golf clubs there and said they thought it would be better if the State designation for the place were Hampton Hills instead of Shinnecock Hills. They made inquiries and found that you had to have a majority of the YEAR ROUND residents vote in favor of this, and indeed, that majority could be just one, but they couldn't think of anybody who DID live there year around. And then they thought of one person, who was old Mr. Terwilliger, the postmaster and stationmaster of the railroad who lived upstairs at the old railroad station and who forwarded their mail. They came as a group to entreat him to vote to change the name of the place. Nope, he said.

The real precedent for the proponents of a Village of Dunehampton was the creation, in the southwestern corner of Southampton Town, of a village out of the string of houses that comprised what is now the Village of Westhampton Dunes. This happened in 1994.

Seems that around 1960, the County of Suffolk voted to place a series of stone jetties from Quogue to the Moriches Inlet ten miles away in order to strengthen the beaches from erosion. They put the job out to bid, and soon the firm of Herman Bishop and Co. was hauling giant boulders and placing them out into the ocean in front of the Quogue Field House. Slowly, the project moved west. It took years. The jetties were placed a quarter mile apart. And then one of the first environmental protests on the eastern end of Long Island took place to get the County to stop desecrating the beaches with these big stone jetties. Demonstrations took place. There were sit-ins. The County stopped the project, three miles and twelve jetties short of the Moriches Inlet. There were about 350 small summer homes in this unprotected area and one by one, the sea took them, because the already installed jetties, like the teeth of a comb, were catching all the sand that was drifting east to west in the littoral drift. In front of these 350 homes the beach virtually vanished. By 1990, almost 130 homes had been destroyed, and practically every former homeowner had filed a lawsuit against the County which was not getting them anywhere.

So then they formed this new village there. It has one road running through it from one end to the other, Dune Road, and it has a Mayor and a little police department and this entire Village,

BREAKING NEWS

Generosa Ammon Pelosi of East Hampton and New York City died on Friday at Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan. She was 46. The cause was breast cancer. Mrs. Pelosi became a widow when her first husband, wealthy financier Ted Ammon, was bludgeoned to death in his Middle Lane mansion in East Hampton on October 22, 2001. The Ammons were in the middle of a divorce. Three months after his death, she married Daniel Pelosi, an electrician who had recently divorced his wife of many years. They had lived in Manorville, New York.

No one has ever been charged with the murder of Mr. Ammon, but police have indicated that Mr. Pelosi was the prime suspect. He told the New York Post in January 2002 that he and Mrs. Ammon had been planning to marry for at least a year before Mr. Ammon's murder. It is also known that Mr. Pelosi installed the alarm system in the Ammon mansion. Just before her death Generosa left her estate to her two children with just $2 million going to Mr. Pelosi.

Mrs. Pelosi was born in Laguna Beach, California, the daughter of an Italian sailor. When she was 10 her mother died, and when she was 17 her only sister died. She attended the University of California at Irvine and obtrained a degree in art, moved to New York where she made sculptures out of discarded industrial objects, then became a real estate agent. She married Mr. Ammon in 1985 having met him showing him a house. Mrs. Pelosi leaves twin children, Alexa and Gregory, age 11, in the care of their nanny, Katheryn Mayne, who has been appointed temporary legal guardian. At the time of her death, she had been separated from Mr. Pelosi..

alarm." This was a device that sniffed for gas fumes in the engine room. I was told if it found any it would make a squealing sound. If it did, stop the boat and open the engine hatch and wait awhile. Otherwise a spark could light the gas fumes and cause an explosion.

Chugging around in Three Mile Harbor one day around dusk, the alarm went off. We opened the engine hatch. The squealing continued. It would not stop. I called the Coast Guard on the ship's radio.

I gave him my location, which was maybe five-hundred yards from my boat slip. "Send a boat," I said. "We're gonna blow."

"Is the engine on?"

"No."

"Well just start it up and motor it in. Just go slow. It's probably the gauge that's broken."

"But what if it isn't?" I persisted.

You could hear a loud sigh on the radio. "Look, when is the last time you heard about a boat exploding?"

My kids were hysterical from laughing so hard. And so I motored in.

That autumn we sold the boat. I'd had about enough of it. The kids, now teenagers, wanted to take it out with their friends. The idea scared me. This was a boat that had almost exploded.

The following spring, which was last year, I bought a sixteen-foot sailboat with a mainsail and a jib. I took it out once into Three Mile Harbor and had a good time. The next time I went out I took my son David. I would show him how to sail. It was a brisk day and we had the mainsail up. Then I had him hoist the jib. But I hadn't hoisted a jib in more than twenty years. I couldn't remember how to do both at the same time. Soon the boat was heading toward shore, the lines and sails tangled up. At the last minute, the boat swerved and went through the jetties into the Shagwong Marina where about two dozen yachtsmen were sitting out on the back decks of their boats getting the sunshine and having cocktails. This apparition, a sort of out-of-control tangle of sails and ropes manned by the three stooges, hoved into sight. Where was the third stooge? The other two were arguing and shouting with one another, but somehow they managed to get the sailboat's auxiliary outboard wrestled onto the stern. They started it up and drove off.

At the end of the summer I sold the sailboat.

This year, I have a 17-foot McKie. It is very much like Perestroika. But better. The seat cushions are not ripped. The outboard is 75-horsepower so it should go faster. It has a button not only to start the engine but to pump out the water. It even has a button that keeps the water pump going automatically.

I will be taking it out for a spin any day now. •

on Village stationery, sent a letter to the White House that essentially said HELP! OUR LITTLE VILLAGE IS DESTROYED. And guess what? Federal help was instantly on the way, a huge steel wall 50 feet high was pounded into the ocean bottom where the ocean had stormed over this peninsula of land, and lo and behold, the Village of Westhampton Dunes was restored with Federal money. And now, these properties, which were underwater and you could buy for $5,000 each, are now worth a hundred times that.

So that's about it. Pay attention to all our laws. Be careful in Southampton about one where, if you accidentally put your shirt on backwards, they arrest you and force you to smash ten pumpkins against a stone wall for every hour you had it on backwards. It's the law. And we know how that is. •

GEORGE SAYS, "THERE ARE SOME THINGS WE GOTTA STRAIGHTEN OUT."

As usual there are too many rumors floating around.

Kazdin Pools & Spas didn't even exist in 1929.

We never were a Speakeasy.

No one never delivered bootleg hooch to us.

George may captain his own boat, but that doesn't mean he was a rum runner.

Elliot Ness never sat in, or did anything else in our hot tub.

And to the best of George's knowlege, no one ever made bathtub gin in one of our pools.

As a matter of fact, in 1929, none of us were born yet.

The confusion must have started because Kazdin Pools & Spas opened its doors over 30 years ago.

Not in 1929.

In these past years, we've met thousands of people who've entrusted us to design, build and maintain their pools and spas.

When we won awards for design and service, they cheered us.

So, one of the first things we want to do this year, is very humbly thank all of you for your trust and loyalty.

WITNESS THE MAGIC

My name is Stan Zeitchick , and I was born in Brooklyn, in 1935. I lived on Long Island for a good part of my life and then moved to Florida, ten years ago. It was in Florida that I became involved with Horses and the Handicapped, and it was then I witnessed the magic. You see, I have been honored and privileged to sit on the board of this wonderful organization that takes severely physically challenged children and puts them on top of a horse. We do hippotherapy, a kind of physical therapy that involves the movement of the horse, a licensed physical therapist and a special indescribable something that produces results which are both documented and amazing.

We are at a crossroads now. Our small organization has been able to service seventy children; but, there are literally hundreds on the waiting list. Their physicians request that they do hippotherapy; but, alas, the cost of supporting the horses and barn has made it impossible for us to expand.

We are looking for that special someone, who is in a position to help us, help all those kids who need us so desperately. If you could leave a legacy of love, via a therapeutic riding facility, that would be established in your name, contact me at 631-287-1133. or 888-5 HELP-US (888-543-5787) and you too will be part of our "Magic."

Filmmaker's DIARY

Saturday, August 23, 12:15 p.m.- This is my last diary entry for Dan's Papers, and I can't believe what a fast and incredible summer it's been making this movie. In almost every way, it's been one of those experiences you enter into thinking it will go a certain way, be a certain shape and size, and feeling pretty certain that you're up to it. But then you look back and realize how naïve and assuming you really were — and you thank God you didn't know what you were getting yourself into because you can't imagine what your life would be like if you never took the leap.

Anyway, first off, I've avoided these past nine weeks discussing what "Fallout" is about and why we wanted to make this film. That was intentional because I didn't want anyone prejudging the film — or its content or value — based solely on my amateur writing skills or ability to explain it here. But there's not much left to lose anymore, I guess, so here goes...

Fallout is the story of two men — an American soldier and an Afghan, both in their 20's — who escape to the same fallout shelter following a nuclear explosion in Manhattan. Trapped here, the men are faced with the basic choice of how they will — or will not — get along with each other. In creating this scenario, our intent is to explore fundamental and relevant issues that shape our world today — political, religious, social and moral — through the interaction between the two men, and hopefully do it in a powerful enough way that inspires viewers to do the same (the goal of any art, I think). As the story unfolds, the drama between the men grows increasingly intense, personal, and most likely, controversial. However, it was never Keif's intent in writing this story to take a soapbox stance or leave audience members with a particular message, especially when the last two years have brought issues into our collective American consciousness that still seem too big for any one person to wrap their mind around. We only hope to inspire thought and dialogue.

As for the ongoing process of bringing this story to the screen, I finally began to settle back into life this past week and get down to the business of what needs to be done. First off, our choice of editors is now down to two candidates. Without naming them, it's clear that both would be great collaborators and partners to work with — professional, talented and passionate — and it's now just a matter of deciding which scenario would work best, and in the end, add the most value to the finished film. Granted, with each day that goes by, my anxiousness grows over the October third entry deadline for Sundance. But if nothing else, the past few months have built up my tolerance for uncertainty, photo finishes and shouting matches with friends. I expect all that to come in handy over the upcoming weeks.

Lastly, one of my remaining personal goals for Fallout is to obtain use of Bruce Springsteen's song "Worlds Apart" for the closing credits. I've already taken my fair share of abuse from friends who know that Springsteen's music has been like religion to me since I was 13, and they pass this off as a producer's lame attempt at putting at least one creative touch on the film. But when I played the song for them, each one agreed it couldn't be more perfect, so I've at least won a few converts. What remains, though, is coming to terms with the helplessness of calling a major record company and giving them the whole "really low-budget, independent, shoestring, underdog, blah blah..." story one more time and hoping they care. We'll see how it goes.

In closing, there's been way too many stories, emotions, ups and downs over the past two months to ever think that keeping a diary would do it justice. In the end, we might not be much more than idealistic fools who still haven't outgrown our 20's and the notion that we can have some kind of impact on the world. There's probably a lot of truth to that, and it's a really annoying place in life to be stuck sometimes. But when I hold this experience up against many others — both the relationships formed and the purpose behind it — I'm at least willing to keep pushing ahead to see how the ending is written. Because there's another important line, I think, that separates reality and apathy, and I take a lot of heart in knowing we've definitely stayed on the right side of that one.

Again, thanks so much to Pinewood West Studios (now East Hampton Studios,) Dan's Papers and many others who supported us along the way. I hope to see you all at a screening party sometime soon!

FRIENDS OF SENATOR CLINTON

Senator Hillary Clinton is very popular in the Hamptons. The proof is in the attendance on a Sunday evening fundraiser. Not only was the attendance in the hundreds, but the list was a who's who. The low key event was held at the home of Ellen Chesler and Matt Mallow in Bridgehampton, an estate with colorful gardens and a golf green or two. Senator Clinton chatted with the crowd and even snuggled a few babies - my daughter Emily included. She talked about the issues and those she is committed to changing, and then answered some questions.

Dan's Papers THE OFFICIAL GUIDE THE HAMPTON CLASSIC

Meadowking: A Real Classic

There are thousands of horses doing what show horses do over at the Hampton Classic this week — of every size, color and personality — but I'm not sure any of them is quite like Meadowking. I know. I'm riding him.

One thing to recognize from the beginning: Meadowking is an acquired taste. I have to admit, when I first set eyes on him, I thought, "He's cute. He isn't the absolute fanciest horse I've ever seen, but he does have a nice color."

When I started to ride him, I quickly found out that he was a little hard on the body. When he trotted, it felt like I was on an egg-beater. After a couple of trips around the ring, I imagined we must have been a few hundred eggs. His canter wasn't any more comfortable. But he had the sweetest, gentlest personality, a wonderful glow about him that just made you want to hug him.

In Meadowking's case, looks and comfort are not everything, and it is very safe to say, "Don't judge a horse by whether it trots like an egg-beater."

Meadowking is known around the barn as "Mel," "Super Mel," "Melly Super Smelly," "Meadow Biscuit," and "Ferdinand the Bull" (like the cartoon bull who doesn't want to fight the toreador, Mel didn't want to fight another horse for first nose under the finish line!). He deserves a lot of affectionate nicknames because he didn't have the easiest childhood. He started off as a racehorse. It wasn't his choice of profession, and he made that evident. He was simply too nice. There were times when he wouldn't even leave the starting gate — he was too busy smelling the flowers and enjoying life.

That made Mel happy. It made his owners miserable. Racehorses content to finish last generally have limited options. But Mel was very lucky. He happened to meet the Toppings, who own Swan Creek Farms in Bridgehampton, and they were willing to take him in and try to transform him into a show horse. Not many trainers would do that, especially since it wasn't clear if Mel had any more interest in leaping over fancy jumps than he did racing other horses. But he was just so lovable.

Before his transformation could barely begin, Meadowking had a terrible scare. In late 2000, Mel colicked when he was down at the Capital Challenge horse show, in Washington, DC, with Mandy and Jagger Topping. Colicking is the equivalent of getting a very serious stomachache, but it's much more dangerous for a horse. It's often fatal. Mandy and Jagger had to rush him to an unfamiliar vet in Washington. Let's not even talk about how expensive it is to treat, let's just say a lot of owners can't or won't pay that much. Mel survived. But he had to have an operation and now he goes around with what amounts to a small screen door in his stomach. Mel doesn't seem to mind.

For the past two years, I have been helping train Mel as a hunter horse. At first, it wasn't easy, because Mel often decided it was more interesting to refuse a jump than to go over it. He often decided it wasn't necessary to get every lead change, as long as he got some of them. Over those two years, however, I have watched Mel develop into a solid, competitive hunter. This year I was riding another horse, but he recently went lame and so I got on Mel again. I was so impressed with how much he had improved from when I had first started riding him. I remember the days when he wouldn't jump through an "in and out" (two jumps close together). Now, I think Mel has decided it's not so bad being a show horse.

That's the thing about Mel. He isn't the half a million-dollar horse that will jump every fence perfectly for you and will win every big horse show for you without any effort on your part. But he tries harder than any horse, making the most out of what he was born with. You end up not caring about how well you do with ribbons, but just about having the chance to ride him. And when everything comes together just right, Mel can be a champion. He won a big show last year, and he was champion in his division at the Sagaponack horse show a few weeks ago. Also, on Sunday, the opening day of the Hampton Classic, Mel won a fifth place ribbon in a field of more than two dozen horses.

This week, as I ride Mel at his egg-beater trot in the Hampton Classic, I know that he isn't the kind of horse that's easy and guaranteed, but that doesn't matter to me. What matters is the goodness inside him and the gratitude I know he feels for being allowed a second chance to prove himself worthy.

I love Mel. He has gone through a lot of troubles in his life, but he has pulled through and deserves to have the best life a horse could have.

I hope I've helped to teach Mel to become a better show horse. I know he has taught me to become a better rider. I know he will give everything he has when he steps into the ring.

The Hampton Classic, Then To Now

By Susan Whitney Simm

The Hampton Classic officially became the Hampton Classic in 1977. But prior to that year, the show's predecessors had a long on-again-off-again history. Originally a local one-day event, the show has become a world class exhibition and competition, attracting horseman and horsewomen from all over the world. Here's a brief history of what came before, and what many are waiting to see, or not see, happen this Sunday.

1900s – The first organized horse show was held in Southampton Village on the shores of Lake Agawam. The local one-day event continued every year until the beginning of WWI. Known officially as the Horse Show in Southampton.

1920s – In 1922, a group of wealthy equestrians founded the Southampton Riding and Hunt Club, which held a show annually until the outbreak of WWII, when the club was disbanded.

1952-58 – Show revived, absent the glamour of the pre-war events.

1959-1964 – A patron, Mrs. Morris Wadley, organized the show as a fundraiser for the Parrish Art Museum. The event became formally incorporated as the Southampton Horse Show, but ended over a legal dispute in 1964.

1971-1975 – Another patron, Mrs. Edwin Schwenk, revived the show in 1971 and it was held at the Topping Horse Farm in Sagaponack through 1975.

1976-1981 – Show moved to Dune Alpin Farm in East Hampton. Almost shut down by hurricane in 1976. Became the Hampton Classic, formally incorporating the Southampton Horse Show, in 1977. Tony Hitchcock and Jean Lindgren officially become "local 1980s – Moved to present 60-acre site on Snake Hollow Road in 1982. Two members of the U.S. Equestrian Team compete as local heroes fresh from gold medal wins in Los Angeles in 1984. The bad weather of 1985 is remembered as the "Year of the Mud." The show was broadcast on ESPN for the first time. 1989: the inauguration of the Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby.

1990s – Hurricane Bob strikes in 1991. 1995: Beezie Patton of upstate N.Y. became the fifth female rider in the show's grand prix history to win that event. An all-weather schooling ring was added in 1992 to outsmart the weather. That same year, the event was honored with a Congressional Proclamation for its contributions to the community. Debbie Dolan-Sweeney wins the grand prix on the smallest horse in the field in 1997.

2000-present – Margie Goldstein Engle wins the Prudential $150,000 Grand Prix in both 2000 and 2001. She does it again in 2002, prompting the big question, "Do I hear four?"

2003 – Hampton Classic 2003 runs through Sunday, August 31. Call 631-537-3177 for information. Located on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton.

Big Event Of The Week

Fascinating Films at Icehouse in Greenport

Icehouse Gallery in Greenport is screening indie films every weekend at its First Street location. The screening room, located downstairs from the gallery, will have two showings of the same program every Saturday night at 7 and 9 p.m. The cost is $12 per person and there are always free refreshments from Aldo's.

Phil Touches Flo

This Saturday evening will encompass a compilation of short films ranging from comedy to documentary. Some of the films include: Tulip, a brilliant and touching Australian drama directed by Rachel Griffiths. The Wildest Show in the South: the Angola Prison Rodeo: every Sunday in October, the Louisiana State Penitentiary at Angola hosts one of America's most unusual events in which amateur cowboys risk their lives to participate in a dangerous sport in front of five thousand free folk. Also included are three short films by David Birdsell: Blue City, Phil Touches Flo and Bad Animals. And from the Damah Film Festival, two powerful, award winning dramas: The Teacup and The Light of Darkness.

The program, including a 15-minute intermission, lasts approximately 2 hours. Call 477-0745 for details. –S.W.Simm

Have You Met...

T.J. Rempe
Musician

By Susan Whitney Simm

Thomas Joseph Rempe, known as T.J., loves music. The 21-year-old musician grew up in Mattituck and has lived in the same house his whole life. His dad is an airplane technician at Mattituck Airport, his mom works for Robert's Jewelers in Southold. And his family ties to the North Fork go back to the 1800s, to Greenport specifically, when ancestors came from Poland, Germany and Ireland hoping to find a better life. They did.

Music has always been part of T.J.'s life. As a youngster, he listened to Rachmaninoff, Beethoven and Gershwin while doing homework, and played in garage bands beginning at the tender age of eleven.

"We played typical teenage grunge rock, loud, distorted stuff," he said during a recent interview on the porch of Rudy's Coffee House in Mattituck. When the bands started breaking up as the kids got older, T.J. joined the group Jimmy and the Rad Rockers, an acoustic funk band, started by Chris Gaffga, son of the minister of Mattituck's Presbyterian Church.

"We recorded an entire album in the church! They have a good recording system there," said T.J.

After graduating from Mattituck High School in 2000, T.J. attended Fredonia University with the goal of becoming a chorus director, but found the workload overwhelming as the young student lacked the music theory that had not yet been offered at Mattituck. So he decided to change tacks, return home to attend Suffolk Community College, and regroup. He graduated this past spring.

"Music was becoming more like a chore, more like homework than something I loved. So I decided to leave music alone as something that I liked to do and not pursue it as a profession."

Jimmy and the Rad Rockers broke up in early 2002, and Chris Gaffga and another band member, David Christianson, left to seek their fortunes in California. That left T.J. on his own, and so he decided to pick up an acoustic guitar and go solo. He dug up some songs he had written over the years and went to work.

> "I've always been about lyrics. A song has to hit me right in the chest. If something isn't getting to me, it just gets canned."

"Dave's my mentor," said T.J. He helped T.J. set up a state-of-the-art recording studio, which he's dubbed "575 studios," in the latter's parent's house. With such a great resource at his fingertips, T.J. writes all his own material and records it himself, including a recent CD, "The Road to Aleph."

"I don't like doing covers [other artist's music]. It's like a painter painting someone else's pictures. I like doing my own stuff, creating from original thoughts."

Though he used to love bands like Nirvana and Nine Inch Nails, anything that is really loud and abrasive has become difficult for him to listen to. Who does he like now?

"John Mayer, Matchbox 20. I also like some of Clapton's music. But my musical idol right now is John Mayer. Chris Gaffga's roommate in the city was best friends with Mayer. I had an opportunity to go see him a few times before he made it big, but I was always too busy. Now he's a full-on celebrity. I feel bad that I never made it to one of the small-time coffee house shows. But I'm going to see him tomorrow night at Jones Beach." T.J. classifies Mayer's music as acoustic rock and finds it very emotional.

"You can tell that the things he writes and sings about have actually happened to him. It's not like some music you hear on the radio where you find yourself asking, what is this about, anyway?

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at The Inn At East Wind

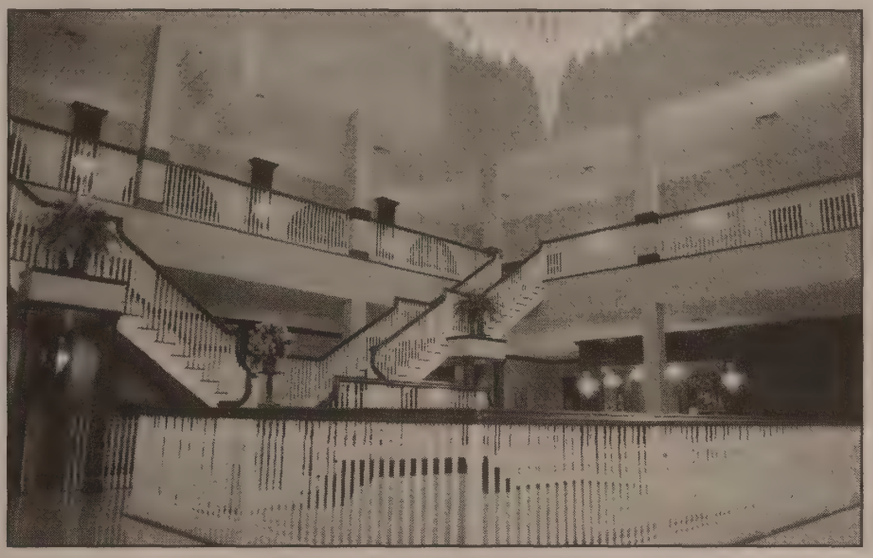
5720 Route 25A, Wading River
631-929-3500

The Inn at East Wind is an impressive new development that caters to many weddings throughout the year and houses a 50-room luxury hotel. It also has Desmond's Pub and Restaurant within the new main buildings and this is very much open and available to the general public.

Named in memory of owner Kenney Barra's father, Desmond's is a warm, elegantly restful room decorated in soft burgundy, brown and green where you can choose to dine on simple pub-type fare or enjoy a meal from the extensive a la carte menu. The pub area seats around 70 and the main restaurant around 100 people.

Executive chef Richard Laurelli is in charge of both venues as well as the other separate kitchens, which are dedicated to looking after the needs of the wedding guests. He has a team of chefs and sous chefs to assist him in ensuring that quality and service levels are maintained even on the busiest days.

Desmond's has a relatively limited but sensibly priced wine list at present ranging from $19 to $26 a bottle, and we were told that this will be expanded shortly and will probably showcase more Long Island wines in the future.



The elegant lobby of The Inn at East Wind

We started with a dish from the daily specials menu. A chilled vegetable soup with some delicate lobster meat was a great blend of tastes and led into some excellent calamari served with an appropriately spicy dipping sauce.

The dish listed as beef and chicken tapas really should be renamed as it is by no stretch of the imagination one of those small plates of tasty morsels found in bars throughout Andalusia. Even though an appetizer, this was a good sized portion of perfectly grilled meats served with a tasty salad of white beans and pickled vegetables.

Steamed mussels were succulent and the sauté of garlic and shallots with fresh herbs and a delicate white broth was a perfect complement. Desmond's serves a good bread selection so this is a good dish for those of us who love to dunk.

From the salad choices we opted to share the special chopped salad, which again proved a curious misnomer as the very, very good selection of crisp radicchio, endive and baby romaine were served whole-leaf. The accompanying crumbled gorgonzola, toasted pecans and dried cranberries with just enough sherry and mustard dressing made this an exceptional salad and one very highly recommended.

From the listed entrees we had to try the fish and chips that came as beautiful white cod in a crisp batter. The accompanying thin cut fries were good but I would have pre-

Tuscan House

Regional Italian Cuisine

Welcome to the Tuscan House. Executive chef William Oster has made it his life's work to make your experience authentic and enjoyable.

Billy frequently travels back to Italy, actively cooking and researching food, wines and ingredients throughout the many regions. Bringing you back the true flavors of Italy. The Tuscan House is located between Main Street Riverhead and the Main Road. This four-year old classic has been referred to as, a True Diamond in the Rough, the Best Kept Secret on Long Island, Italian Stand Out, Exceptional and Best of the Best by critics from all over.

What we find important about those accolades is, it shows us that our extreme dedication, quality of product, effort and knowledge has been recognized and appreciated and we humbly thank all those involved for that.

ferred some traditional thick cut chips for authenticity and personal taste. Lamb chops were our other choice and these came perfectly grilled and the accompanying vegetables made this another excellent choice.

The dessert choices covered all tastes. We opted for a blueberry crème brulee to share and the blueberries really did add something extra to one of the most classically simple yet complete desserts.

Until Desmond's becomes more widely known it would be easy for prospective diners to drive past this imposing building and think that it was not the place to call in for an impromptu meal. Don't be fooled. Apart from having the luxury of plenty of parking space, Desmond's is already an excellent restaurant that promise to become even better with changes Kenney already has in hand to change the layout and the facilities. Desmond's is a very welcome addition to the roll of excellent restaurants on eastern Long Island. They really must be doing a lot of things right for Kenney Barra has been voted New York State Restaurateur of the Year for 2003/2004 and will receive this award at a special function at The Inn at East Wind later this year.

Sultans Kitchen

117 Old Country Road,
Riverhead
631-369-9766

This Turkish restaurant is situated in the Waldbaum's shopping center on Route 58 just west of the traffic circle, and in the year and a half that is has been open, it has attracted a loyal following. Mustafa Gulsen, the very personable and ambitious owner, has done a lot in that time to enhance the interior of what had been a Pancake House in its previous life.

Today when you enter Sultan's Kitchen you find a spacious, airy room that can seat around 65 at tables and banquettes. The room is done in a warm red, which contrasts with the white banquettes and the red and white table settings. The walls have a selection of modern art and Turkish artifacts and, thankfully, the soft background music is Turkish.

As I have said in previous articles, the Turkish cuisine is one of the oldest in the world and benefits from the influence of so many travelers who passed through or lived in that beautiful country. The food also embodies all that doctors tell us today is good eating – olive oil, lots of grains and vegetables and healthy nuts, such as pistachios and walnuts and honey rather than sugar – so what better excuse could you have for indulging yourselves in food that will tantalize your taste buds and fill you up, all this at a very manageable price.

All that Turkish food needs, if you are not familiar with the dishes, is an open mind, because nothing is too exotic or over-spiced. The wonderful red lentil soup that we started with confirmed this. Lentils are very simple but when made into this soup, which is one of the Turkish specialties, they become magical. It is served with a slice of lemon and, to our taste, the addition of some lemon juice really adds the finishing touch.

Appetizers are fundamental to a Turkish meal and we indulged in a wonderful medley. Stuffed grape leaves were really excellent, delicate tender leaves stuffed with rice, pine nuts and spices. Babaganush is a blend of grilled eggplant with sesame oil and garlic and mayonnaise and was perfect on the pita bread accompaniment. Acili ezme was the spiciest of the appetizers and this mix of chopped tomato, onion, red pepper, garlic and crushed walnuts in olive oil really filled the mouth with wonderful flavor. The Russian salad was extremely good even though not really part of the classic Turkish cookbook. But the eggplant salad certainly was. The Turks probably are more imaginative with the way they use eggplants in their dishes than anyone else. Here, grilled and served with peppers, green onions, parsley, tomatoes and lemon juice, the final result was something to really savor. From the hot appetizers we could not resist the delicate cubes of deep fried veal liver and a taste of lamacun, the very different Turkish pizza.

Salads are an integral part of Turkish food and here you can choose from a shepherds' salad, a simple but effective blend of tomatoes, cucumber, onions and parsley in vinaigrette, or the more complex Mediterranean salad with lettuce, carrots, tomato, cucumber, feta cheese and black olives with a lemon oil dressing. Choose either and you will not be disappointed.

Sultan's Kitchen offers a wide range of the traditional kebab and gyro dishes based on lamb or chicken, but the menu will shortly include fish and lamb chops. We sampled these and Mustafa would not reveal the secrets of his marinade, but suffice it to say that the end result was out of this world. Definitely a dish to look out for when you visit.

Desserts include the well-known baklava and kadyif, but we had to try the rice pudding, that was really exceptional, and sekerpare and kalburabasti, which were succulent treats full of honey and pistachio nuts (see you can indulge in these and feel good because of the medically approved ingredients!). With these we sipped Turkish coffee made with exactly the degree of sweetness we requested and this was excellent with the desserts.

Mustafa Gulsen has created a Turkish restaurant that he is determined to keep authentic in taste and style. This is a wonderful place to visit and revisit and explore the various dishes on the menu. Everything is very fresh and well presented and the staff is very friendly and helpful. Sultan's Kitchen brought Turkish food to this eastern part of Long Island and, based on the first year and a half of operation, it will continue to set the standards for many years to come.

Mayer's lyrics are obviously well thought out and very emotional. I think I've probably cried to all of them."

T.J. has an act, called Cover Me, with singer Katy Groeber, another North Fork native. "We perform songs from over the past 40 years, like "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You," songs like that. We performed at Fauna Restaurant in Aquebogue last night, and we're at Red Door Restaurant here in Mattituck every Saturday night. We also do private parties. But I also do my own shows. I have to perform my own material, otherwise I get too out-of-mind with it. It goes back to the image of the painter copying someone else's painting. If I don't write it, I can't get into it. When I perform a song that I wrote, it takes me back to the time when I wrote it. It's like therapy. I relive whatever was happening at the time."

T.J. is currently writing what he describes as "experimental acoustic, trying out different kinds of sounds, trying to reach people in a new way." Completely self-taught, T.J. plays guitar, piano, drums, and bass guitar.

Where does he find inspiration for his songs?

"From tragedy, from good times. Whatever the experience, a song will be born out of it. My first album, a demo that I recorded myself last summer, I made because I had always wanted to hear myself on tape. But over the winter, I decided to make something bigger, bring more instruments into it."

T.J. wrote the tracks and performed the music for each of the instruments – guitar, piano, bass, drums, vocals – and recorded each track one at a time, over each other. The result is a surprisingly professional sounding CD, "The Road To Aleph." Some of the tracks, especially "Something in My Head," reminds me of early Counting Crows. "Stuck Up," the third track, is a song about writing a song. It was inspired by the notion that a person "has the path for the rest of his or her life basically figured out" by the age of 23. And "Glass Grin," one of my favorite tracks, is about a special New Year's Eve, or, more accurately, two special New Year's Eves.

T.J.'s parents are very pleased with both his interest in music and professional approach. He's not into hanging out and partying – except at Rudy's Coffee House, where you can find him working and writing songs on weekends when he's not playing a Cover Me gig. He has also recently begun playing with guitarist Steve Cybulski. "Steve's really smart, a prodigy. He's only been playing for a year but he's really good. We're both in the Cutchogue Fire Department marching band together."

And the future?

Off to Dowling College this fall, T.J. is pursuing a degree in business management. But he's confidant that writing music will always be a part of his life.

"I've always been about lyrics. A song has to hit me right in the chest. If something isn't getting to me, it just gets canned. My second album... I was engaged late last year, and that came apart at the seams in January. All this happened right when I was starting to record, and so the whole album was about going into and coming out of this turbulent experience. It's a very emotional album. The songs I respect most come from real, true emotion. Not from partying and going to the club. Pop Music to me is just entertainment."

Visit TJRempe.com, T.J.'s personal website that is always being refined by its creator. Or stop by Rudy's in Mattituck on the weekend. "The Road to Aleph" is available at Rudy's in Mattituck, Rudy's West in Riverhead, and Scoops Ice Cream in Cutchogue.

featuring New York and Hollywood's premier playwrite Lisa Scorolla's original new play "She Got Away."

Friday will be a working process with the director. Sunday's performance will be the result of Friday's experiments. Upon completion you the audience will have the opportunity of a verbal participation with the cast, director and playwrite. Remember to bring paper and pencils; this will be the only opportunity to have an active role in how the play develops. The performance will be followed by a Q & A (questions and answers). You the audience may have some improvisational work to do. Stay tuned next week to see what famous actors are coming to Riverhead.

All shows are twenty dollars ($20.00). Please call the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall at 631-727-5782 to make your reservations now! For further information, call Dhonna Harris Goodale at 631-369-9581

Great Escapes: The Reserve

Pack your bag and light the lights! As the summer ends, Hamptonites are getting ready to pack their bags, and hibernate for the winter. Following a long-standing tradition, many east enders most will be enjoying the winter months in the more pleasant climate of Boca Raton, Florida.

This year the hottest attraction will be The Reserve, Boca's newest and most upscale shopping center...Surrounded by Boca Raton's most luxurious and affluent communities, The Reserve will certainly enhance the already fashionable lifestyle of all Florida residents. With six great restaurants (including Ben's New York Kosher Deli), the finest boutiques and salons and a state-of-the-art Publix (supermarket), it will be the clear choice for the entire family's shopping needs. With the most convenient parking amenities around, shopping at The Reserve will be a hassle free experience. In addition to all the great stores, The Reserve will feature year round activities including art exhibits, wine tasting and fashion shows, making it the perfect place to go for activities and entertainment.

The developer of The Reserve, David Yudell, was born and bred on Long Island, and has made it a point to incorporate the Northern feel by building the first all brick shopping center, The Reserve that is already being dubbed, "The Country Club of Shopping Centers." With an array of high-end boutiques, salons and galleries, the excitement of South Beach will be combined with the elegance of Worth Avenue.

With construction already underway, The Reserve, will undoubtedly revolutionize the shopping experience when it opens in January 2004. At nearly 144,000 square feet, it will be unique, designed in 100% brick and surrounded by lush landscaping. Parking will never be a problem, due to the more than 750 centrally located parking spaces (designated for customers). Publix will anchor the center with one of its larger facilities (51,000 square feet), providing its own archway for the most pleasant shopping experience. In addition, The Reserve will feature a variety of restaurants including Villa Rosano, Tempura House and Healthy Bites Grill which will premier its salad bar, soup station and much more.

The Reserve will be home to Boca's finest boutiques, specialty stores and eateries, as well as banks, salons and jewelers. Fidelity Federal Bank and Trust as well as Suntrust Bank recently announced plans to open their newest branches within The Reserve. There will also be a men's barber shop with flat screen TV's for stock and sport enthusiasts.

From greeting cards to gourmet chocolates, the store has hundreds of gifts guaranteed to make everyone happy. They have satisfied children and executives alike for the past fifteen years. Their signature gift baskets can be custom made to fit any occasion and, at a fair price.

Fidelity Federal Bank and Trust as well as Suntrust Bank recently announced plans to open their newest branches with The Reserve. There will also be a men's barbershop with flat screen

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Well, here it is, the biggest weekend of summer. Summer? Did I say summer? The Hampton Classic and Labor Day means it's over till next year...Let's do some serious end of summer shopping!

The sale everyone waits for every year is at Porch & Patio on Montauk Highway in East Quogue. Look for their "End of Season Sale" that is going on right know with 20% to 50% off on selected merchandise. Hurry there for the best selections...We may have an Indian summer.

Christopher Fischer Cashmere Collections on Jobs Lane in Southampton and on Main Street in East Hampton is having a "Super Summer Sale" with 30% to 60% off selected merchandise on ladies, men's and home products. Now is the time to stock up and get ready for fall fashion. Yeah!

There is a tag sale with up to 50% off on estate pieces at amazing prices at Ann Madonia Antiques on Jobs Lane in Southampton. Lot's to choose from here. Take a look.

Rose Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton is showing Marya Dabrowski Collections from August 22 through Sept 2...You can meet Mary (the designer) on August 22 and 23.

If you are looking for pottery, there is a great source right here in the Hamptons...Waterstone, Inc., on Mariner Drive in Southampton is now featuring planters in glazed ceramic, terracotta, black zinc, limestone and much more. The owner and landscape designer, Sandford Kempner decided an affordable source was badly needed after years of looking for pieces for his own clients. Waterstone is featuring wholesale prices and a wide selection of styles focused on selling to designers and contractors and homeowners are also welcomed here. I found an unusual piece of pottery in violet/purple for my fireplace hearth. Love it!

If you are looking for something cool and refreshing to serve your guests this weekend, look no further than McNamara Liquors in the Bridghampton Commons, the Sag Harbor Liquor Store on Main Street and Water Street Liquors in Sag Harbor. It's called Limonce, sells for (about $20) and is Italy's number one selling Limoncello. The taste a little bit sweet, a little tangy with lots of refreshing flavor. You can add seltzer and Cranberry juice and serve it by the pitcher. It takes the swelter out of the summer is one of the newest and favorite house guest this season. Try it, you'll love it!

Also at the commons, stop in at Portico for their Bridgehampton location store closing. Everything must go at 30% to 50% off the lowest ticketed price, with new bedding and furniture arriving from their warehouse. Look for great deals on bed and bath and furniture and accessories. I'm there!

Montauk's At Home En Provence on Tuthill Road is having their summer merchandise sale along with furniture and floor samples. There are some great deals here, so hurry on down...Coming soon will be their new holiday store, open all year.

Hot off the press: Tanger Outlet Stores in Riverhead is doing a "Shop Tax Free" Labor Day week from August 26 through September 1, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Hunt down great outlet bargains at Gap Outlet, Carter's, Children's Place Outlet, Timberland, Polo Ralph Lauren Factory Store, Nike, Tommy Hilfiger, Aeropostale, Lillian Vernon, Off Fifth Saks Fifth Avenue, Ann Taylor, Ann Klein, Samsonite, to name a few. Get going; hate to say it but Christmas shopping is right around the corner.

Arlines Ski & Board Supply on Main Road in Aquebogue is having their "Final Summer Clearance" on all summer merchandise, with 25% to 50% off and no sales tax on clothing and footwear from August 26 through September 1...Now is the time to get your favorites at half the price. Also there will be a tent sale on Saturday and Sunday, August 30 and 31 to clear out all the summer merchandise. Swimwear starts at $19. Merrell and Teva footwear at the lowest prices ever. T-shirts are $10.. Huge discounts on all wakeboards, water skis and kayaks.

Time to take a break and get my self geared for next week. Oy, I do need a raise...Maybe we'll do some "Back To School Shopping." Until next week. Ciao and Happy Labor Day Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you...

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Shop The Classic Boutique Garden At Sunset

It's this time of the year again, The Hampton Classic that will be running from August 24 through August 31. It's the equestrian event of the year with so much going on including "An Evening of Shopping" to take place on Thursday, August 28, from 5 to 7 p.m. Right up my alley...

Every year more than four dozen vendors set up shop at the Boutique Garden at the Hampton Classic which returns to Bridgehampton, to sell their wares throughout the course of Long Island's premier week-long equestrian event. For seven days, visitors to the Classic can browse and shop for everything from jewelry to art to equestrian supplies and leather goods.

The Carriage House

As the sun fades out over the showgrounds and the summer of 2003 starts to slip away, an "Evening of Shopping" is the perfect way to take some time off to relax and savor the last days of summer. The shopping extravaganza is for everyone; just come on down and shop 'til you drop...

For one special night, the forty-six vendors at the Boutique Garden will keep their doors open a little late to provide visitors and shoppers alike, the opportunity to spend the evening on the Classic's beautiful showgrounds, browsing through the boutiques that offer exquisite shopping opportunities while at the same time enjoying music by the Jim Turner band plus free hors d'oeuvres, wine and more.

"By keeping the Boutique Garden open late one night, competitors, trainers, and all those busy with the horse show during the day will have the opportunity to shop at the Classic's top quality boutiques in the evening after they have finished all their horse show duties." Said Tony Hitchcock, Executive Director of the Hampton Classic.

Some of the vendors that will be at the Boutique Garden are: American Express, Ann Kolb Gallery, Ashley's Fine Jewelry, Bombardier FlexJet, Brennan's Bit & Bridle, Briar Hill Signworks, The Carriage House (Sag Harbor), Der Dau Custom Made Boots & Shoes, Cyndy Love Designs, Eclectic Design, Emilio Clothier & Specialty Shop Ltd., Faith Designs, Fountanebleau II, Fox Run Ltd., Freymann Enterprises, David Gregory, Hampton Classic Kids, Hampton Classic Poster Booth, Hampton Conservatories, IZ New York, Jaguar, Land Rover, Marders Nursery, Monkey Business, O'Halloran Company, Connie Deussen Oshrin, Outback Survival Gear, PJ Huntsman & Company, Penny Whistle toys, Inc., Petography, Inc. Pinnell Custom Leather, The Putting Green, Sandor Fine Animal Portraits, Silverado Jewelry, Southampton Hospital, Steuben Glass, Tracey Tooker Hats, Victoria's Mother.

The Jim Turner Band will be performing throughout the shopping event. Jim has assembled some of the finest musicians in the Hamptons in his group. There is no admission charge to enter the showgrounds for "An Evening of Shopping" after the day's competition has been completed and there is never any charge for parking. Can't beat that! See you there. Ciao and Happy Boutique Shopping!

Reserve (continued from page 113)

TV's for stock and sport enthusiasts. SBOD have clearly set the standard for all up-scale shopping centers. They are committed to providing comforts and conveniences that country club residents are accustomed to. With amenities like these, it's no surprise people are eagerly anticipating the grand opening.

The growing numbers of families in Boca Raton are eagerly anticipating the opening of this state-of-the-art shopping center. The Reserve is clearly the prototype for all future shopping destinations.

What's more...the bridge is going in and building begins by months end. For more information about "The Country Club of Shopping Centers" contact Carol Horn at 561-998-3459.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Shakespeare's line, "...a rose by any other name would smell as sweet." could certainly apply to the various names of automobiles that have been manufactured. Any high performance auto produced in Italy would most likely sound and handle like an Alfa, Ferrari or Lamborghini, whatever it happened to be called. The same can be said for the German Porsche. But what if the Porsche had been designed by another famous German company in the fifties, the Borgward Automobilwerke? Their sports model was called the Isabella. Imagine a macho Porsche owner bragging to a hot new date about his new exotic Isabella ? It just doesn't work.

Talk about strange names, Porsche is one of the strangest names in automobiledom. We're just used to it. I distinctly remember seeing my first Porsche, a fifties something or other. The car was white and looked to me like a giant well worn bar of soap. Being a clueless kid, especially when it came to foreign cars, I read the name as Borsche. I walked away from the car wondering why anyone would name a car after a popular Jewish soup.

If Porsche wasn't so well engineered, it probably would not have made it as a famous marque. The Porsche factory didn't even give its models names, just numbers. They were all numbered consecutively as design exercises. The first Porsche was the 356 design. What were the designs before number 356, Panzer, Tiger Tanks and Volkswagens ? Yes, they were. The next model, about fifteen years later, was the 901, which for legal reasons had to be changed to the 911. What was Porsche design doing between the numbers 356 and 901? Thinking really hard?

Mercedes Benz and BMW are two other companies that don't use names, only numbers. What is it about this Teutonic threesome ? Evidently, they have always thought numbers are cool. These companies did the same thing during World War Two. They had their Messerschmidt ME 109 and Focke-Wolfe 180 fighter planes, while we had the Mustang, and the Brits their Hurricane and Spitfire fighters.

Mercedes-Benz model numbers can actually drive you crazy, because there are so many of them with different codes. During the 80s, it was rumored that Beverly Hills High School was giving an accredited course on Mercedes nomenclature. Just when everyone thought they got it right, with the letters being placed after the numbers, like 500SL, in the nineties, Mercedes reversed everything (SL500), just to confuse the kids. Those sneaky Germans.

Nobody likes names better than we Americans. Look at Operation Iraqi Freedom. To this day, every time the military makes a move over there, they tack on a silly name like Operation Desert Spear or Operation Kick Sand In Their Face. When the soldiers return to the states, they won't be interested in Hummer's H1 or H2, because they will just remind them of Iraq. They drove them for free over there, but it wasn't a fun ride. These brave guys will want American cars with names like Durango, Ramcharger and Bronco.

For decades we've been giving our cars great names. Did you know that one of the names actually considered for the '55 Thunderbird was "Hep Cat" ? Thunderbird won out, thank God.

Three of America's greatest sports cars have names with bizarre origins. The Corvette is named after a small, slow ship, while the Viper and Cobra are named after poisonous snakes that I personally hope never to meet.

The Cadillac Eldorado just sounds rich. Always has, always will. Same for the Chrysler New Yorker. I'm surprised no manufacturer has used "Hamptons" in its model lineup. How about a Bentley Southampton ? It works for both America and England. We could also have a Chevy "Hampton Bays" pick-up. A Chrysler minivan could easily be called "The Sag Harbor", and Jeep could add to its native American named vehicles, like the Cherokee and Chieftain. How about a new model called the " Shinnecock" ?

I miss the old names like the Ford Ranchwagon, Chevy Nomad, Plymouth Fury, Buick Century and Nash Rambler. These names as fanciful as they were, made a lot more sense than some today, like Maxima, Impreza, Celica and Prius. What the hell do these mean?

There are hundreds of executives at auto companies and their advertising agencies who are quite highly paid to devise names for new models. Please guys, come up with names that mean something, not those that sound like dialogue from an old Godzilla movie. If these weird car names keep coming, maybe the Germans are right. It may be boring, but play by the numbers when it comes to naming new cars.

HOME FOR THE SUMMER... By David Lion Rattiner

Thinking

With summer winding down it can feel kind of shocking to think that pretty soon the leaves are going to start changing colors. Yesterday I looked at the calendar and simply refused to believe what the date said. After all, it was still warm outside; you could still wear shorts and a t-shirt. But then, last Sunday rolled around, and there was that little chill in the air. Do you remember this? It was not hard to notice. The air simply was just a little bit cooler than normal. Cool enough to wear jeans and a long sleeve shirt. Cool enough to wear shoes with socks. Cool enough to run for five minutes and not break a sweat.

This little chill was a deadly reminder that summer is coming to an end. Not that I really have a problem with that.I am excited about heading back to Boston and getting back to a school schedule. But it is always kind of sad when the summer starts to come to an end. You start to think to yourself on whether or not you did everything that you said you were going to do for the summer. Did you learn how to surf? Did you read those books? Did you write that novel? The check list starts going off in your head and you realize that you need another month of summer.

Out of all the summers that I have ever had, this summer has gone by the fastest. Everyone says that it has something to do with the rain but I really don't think so. It has rained in previous summers, we have even had terrible hurricanes in previous summers. I think that the reason the summer went by so quickly was because I spent a lot of my time thinking about what I was going to be doing when the summer ended. I would feel guilty if I was sitting on the beach. I think this feeling of guiltiness stems from the fact that I have absolutely no plan about what is going to happen after the summer. I keep making the plans of course. The plan as of right now is to head back to school, but that of course is temporary. I was also thinking of going traveling, which most likely won't happen, but that of course is temporary as well.

I keep finding myself thinking about what I am going to be doing after that. I keep thinking about what my first job out of college is going to be like. I constantly worry that I am going to be miserable there, that I am going to be wishing that I was traveling or back in school. Or maybe I am going to be wishing that I am doing something completely different. The thing that is so stupid is that I have had jobs that a lot of people probably would not like, but I am so grateful for actually having a job and doing something, that I usually am pretty happy no matter what I am doing. Even when I was a garbage boy at Main Beach when I was fourteen I was happy to be working. Why do I think for some reason I am not going to be happy?

When I graduate, I am going to be graduating with a degree in finance. The chances that I am going to be coming out of school and getting a job in that field are pretty high in my opinion. I feel good about all of this, it is practical and it is interesting believe it or not a lot of the time. In a way, finance can be a lot like art. There are all of these tactical moves that that institutions make in order to get money that when you look at them closely, it can really surprise you at how creative they are. You end up saying to yourself, wow, the guy that found this financial loophole really thought this one through.

On the other hand however, I could be graduating and doing something completely different. My friend John for example will most likely do this. John, one of my closest friends, is going to school for mathematics. You would think that he wants to work for NASA or something like that. But I'm pretty sure that he has plans of becoming a police officer one day in Washington D.C. then hopefully making it to the FBI academy and becoming and agent.

When he told me this I got incredibly jealous. I always felt that John and I were in this whole, I have no idea what the hell I am going to do when I graduate thing, together. But here he was, less than two weeks ago, telling me that he thinks that he wants to be a cop and he is serious about it.

I want to be a cop damn it. I would love to run around in a police officer uniform, flashing my lights and chasing bad guys. It would be great to be a cop in Washington D.C. There is all that history to it, there would be lots to do, we would have all this neat training. John and I could be partners, it would be great. On the other hand however, the last thing I

Procustomclubs.com: Get In The Swing

As an average but devoted weekend golfer I see them all the time. You know who I'm talking about. The guy who joins up with your threesome. The one with the new bag and the perfectly matched set of brand new $1,000 clubs. He slowly draws the 7 iron out of the bag, gazing lovingly at it. You try to stand between him and your old worn down clubs so he doesn't sneer at you. He addresses the ball then lifts the club up in front of him to admire it's beauty once more before he swings. You secretly wish you were him. He chunks the shot and the ball dribbles and dies 12 yards ahead! You're glad you are you.

In a society where having the best is a necessity, weekend golfers are creating a hole for themselves. The question to ask yourself is this: what happens if you spend $1,000, get new grips, heads with new grooves, shafts that match your swing speed, and a club that has just the right weight to create a smooth balanced swing...and you still stink? Where do go from there?

The solution is two-fold. First I went online to www.procustomclubs.com. They are custom online club makers located on Long Island. I chose a set of irons quite like the $1,000 models I see so often on the course, (and on TV). Everything is done online, including the custom fitting room, measuring floor to finger tip distance, swing tempo, average distance, glove size, etc.

My total for the new XL 6 irons with shipping and handling was $225! For the next week or two my wife kept likening me to Ralphie in A Christmas Story. I just hoped I would get my Red Ryder BB Gun and not the Little Orphan Annie Decoder Ring.

The second part of the solution involved a trip to Poxabogue Golf Course in Wainscott for a lesson. Now I know how some people would rather be dipped in hot oil than change their swing. But I wanted to have some consistency in my game and I would not be able to blame my game on old clubs any more. Most Americans have a grip born of baseball games with our right hand sliding more to the right than it should. With my new proper grip and stance I now felt as awkward as I possibly could. Why not put me in a tutu and finish me off? Golfers hate and avoid lessons because they fear loosing a swing, they know even if it is unreliable. I felt as though I was a beginner again.. What I did notice, though, was that I was square to the ball and hitting it straight. As I kept hitting, I understood the swing keys I could use every time. Knowing what you should be doing is half the battle. I knew from a lesson years ago that my grip would eventually become comfortable. If I had to feel awkward and hit the ball straight for a while I could live with that..

Finally my new clubs arrived. Red Ryder himself would have approved, (I didn't get skunked)! I headed out to the local course with my new swing and my new clubs. As fate would have it I was paired with Jeremy who plays on the local High School Golf Team. He had that $1,000 set of clubs. I told him about my new clubs and waited until after he hit his 8 iron on a par 3. His first shot had landed 18 yards short of the green. I handed him my 8 iron. His next shot was just off the green. He raised his eyebrows and gazed at the club a little too long for my liking, but we played on. On a par four he pulled out a 4 iron, waited, and looked over at me. I walked over and we switched clubs. He hit a beautifully high shot that landed in the right center of the fairway. He couldn't stop talking about the balance and weight of my club. The most telling moment for me however, was after I hit a poor tee shot (I had new irons, not woods). I was faced with a 200 yard shot to the green. I was gripping my new 3 iron in the standard death grip when I decided to relax and swing as I was taught. I squared up the club, slowly brought it back, shifted my weight, released my hips, and swung through the ball. At that moment I was Freddie Couples. The ball hit the sweet spot and with a slight draw landed just short of the green.

I returned to Poxabogue just after closing to meet with Scott Terilli the head golf instructor. I asked him to try hitting a few balls with my 6 iron. Instead of hitting off the mats he dropped a few balls in the uneven ground near a fence and proceeded to hit perfect shot after shot out over the booths onto the range. Scott offered a solution for every weekend golfer's game. Get a great set of clubs that you can afford and take one lesson per week for at least five weeks with the money you save. Within five weeks you will have the understanding of how to consistently hit good shots, become comfortable with your new swing, and gain a confidence that will give you the ability to do the unthinkable-follow a good shot with a good shot! The result will be a round of golf on the weekend that you can brag about on Monday and a custom set of clubs that just might outdo your pricey competition.

want to do is get shot.

I'd be a movie star, it seems like they have the life. Kind of hard to break into that field so they say. I'd be a rock star too, I mean, I was in chorus in high school, how hard can it be?

I'm so lucky to be able to talk about all of these worries to you. I appreciate you listening, seriously I do. I think that my Dad is getting kind of tired of hearing me think about it. Generally his response is usually, "Oh you will be fine, do not worry about it." Then he is off and I feel good for about half a second.

I wish I could be more like my dog Moo. Yes, like a cow goes moo. This dog does not think about anything. He does not think about the environment going to hell, he does not think about all of the terrible things in the world, he does not even think about the fact that he is a dog, and really only has about in years to live before he dies of old age. Of course, he is a dog, they don't think all that much.

Still, I was riding in my truck to the beach with Moo on a random act. I just wanted to bring the dog to the beach. I never had done that before, and I wanted to do it. We were driving in the car together, his head sticking out the window, slobbering on the seat. So excited. He could not believe that we were heading to the beach. This was what life was all about for Moo, the wind in your hair, summer at its end, heading for the beach, not worrying about anything.

ASIAN-INSPIRED SATAYS FOR DO-AHEAD COCKTAIL PARTY TIDBITS

It's the official end of summer. It's Labor Day weekend and the last hurrah for get-togethers. In this socially busy season brimming over with benefits, all manner of parties and activities savvy hosts can catch up with friends "on the run" by committing to a cocktail party. Sure it takes planning ahead but here are some simple thoughts to create a diverse selection of do-ahead cocktail tidbits and any take-out items you would like to add.

The simplicity of satay, pieces of meat or fish threaded on bamboo skewers, with a selection of marinades from sweet to spicy, makes it apt for summer. Marinades can be prepared ahead and skewers soaked for hours in preparation for grilling your satays. Butterflied strips of boned chicken breasts are marinated in an oriental mixture of ginger, garlic, sugar, soy and lemon. Similarly, strips of flank steak are marinated in a smooth Indonesian inspired paste. Broiled fish yaki, a Japanese barbecue, translates to sea scallops in a marinade of soy sauce, sake, sugar and ginger. Your choice of food can be skewered ahead and seasoned with the varied marinades according to the respective recipe. A rice and vegetable salad makes a fine accompaniment for the satays.

The fun part comes when your grill is ready for your guests to get involved grilling their choice of skewer to their own tastes and the mood of the moment.

CHICKEN SATAY WITH PEANUT SAUCE

Boneless skinless chicken breasts are brined, grilled and served with a succulent peanut sauce.

Serves 6

To brine the chicken

1 quart water
1 cup fresh orange juice
3 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt
3 whole cloves
3 whole boneless chicken breasts split

For the peanut sauce

Zest of 1 large lime
1 teaspoon sesame oil
2 teaspoons freshly grated ginger
2 tablespoon sugar
1/4 cup fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons fish sauce (Nuoc Mam)
1/2 cup natural peanut butter
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
Several drops hot chili oil

Soak 12 wooden skewers for a minimum of 30 minutes

1. Pour water and juice into a saucepan and stir in salt and cloves. Bring to the edge of a boil and remove from heat. Pour into a non-reactive, glass or ceramic bowl large enough to hold the chicken. Make certain the brine is completely chilled before adding the chicken breasts.

2. While brine is cooling trim chicken breast halves of excess fat and gristle. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels. Place one layer deep in a freezer-going container and freeze for 1 hour. Freezing the breasts will make it easier to butterfly each one so that you have 12 pieces. Put the pieces, including the filets that pull away from the breasts, into the brine. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 5-6 hours. Soak 12 wooden skewers for a minimum of 30 minutes.

3. Meanwhile place all the ingredients for the peanut sauce in a mixing bowl and stir to mix to a smooth paste. Transfer to a small bowl for serving.

4. Thread each butterflied breast with a skewer. Prepare charcoal or gas grill for cooking. When grill is medium hot cook the skewered chicken and any extra filets for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes each side. Transfer to a platter, one layer deep, and serve with the peanut sauce.

SKEWERED SEA SCALLOPS SATAY

For other seafood you may substitute 2-inch cubes of tuna, mackerel or shrimp.

Serves 6

2 pounds sea scallops, side muscle removed

For the marinade

1/2 cup soy sauce, preferably Japanese
1/4 cup sweet sake wine or sherry
2-3 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
Dash freshly ground white pepper

Soak 12-18 wooden skewers for a minimum of 30 minutes.

1. Rinse scallops, and pat dry with paper towel. Thread the scallops on skewers, dividing them evenly and arrange them in a shallow glass (Pyrex) or ceramic pan.

2. Place marinade ingredients in a mixing bowl and stir to mix. One half hour before cooking pour the marinade over the scallops.

3. Prepare charcoal or gas grill for cooking. Spoon the marinade over the skewers and place 3-4 inches from heat. Cook about 2 minutes on each side and baste when skewers are turned.

FLANK STEAK SATAY

Serves 6 - 8

3 pounds flank steak

For the marinade

4 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup finely chopped onion
4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
4 teaspoons ground chili powder
2 teaspoons turmeric powder
1 tablespoon peanut butter
1 teaspoon brown sugar
Grated lemon rind from one-half lemon
3/4 cup water
Coarse salt to taste

Soak 30 wooden skewers for a minimum of 30 minutes

1. Slice flank steak across the grain into 1/2-inch strips (freeze the meat for 30 minutes for easier slicing).

2. Heat the oil in a skillet and saute the onion, garlic and ginger for 3-4 minutes until tender. Add remaining ingredients and stir to a smooth paste. Simmer for 2 minutes. Thread steak strips on skewers and arrange in a shallow glass (Pyrex) or ceramic dish. Spread the hot paste over the meat coating it well.

3. Prepare charcoal or gas grill for cooking. Place skewers about 3-4 inches from heat and cook 3 minutes on each side until crisp and brown. Baste with any leftover marinade.

Dining In The Hamptons

Jean Luc East

103 Montauk Hwy, East Hampton
631-324-1100

It is just so cool. Everything about Jean Luc East is done right. From the moment you pull into the pebble driveway, you get the feeling that you are entering a whole new world of restaurant dining. The bar is raised, the standard is set, and Jean Luc East delivers with incredible style, timing, accuracy, and of course, food. It is amazing what they have done here.

The new restaurant, located off of Montauk Highway in East Hampton, operates like a sailboat on a perfect day. Everything feels right, down to the very last detail, it's filled with passion, drive, and elegance. The entire staff is beautiful, all greeting you with a smile and charm, "Welcome to Jean Luc East." You can't help but smile, this is going to be a night to remember.

The hostess desk is situated with an elevated view of the restaurant. The interior design is classic and sexy and does not go un-noticed. "Right this way sir, we have your table ready". Your seated promptly. Every table at Jean Luc is located positioned so that you have plenty of space with plenty to see. The music is a variation of different fast and slow beats set just at the right level. The menu is extensive and more than impressive, possibly the most interesting and detailed menu around. It becomes obvious to you that you are going to need more than a few minutes to review the menu and wine list. Everything on the menu looks wonderful and fresh.

For starters, I decided that I would give the raw bar a try. The most interesting thing on the menu to me, looked like the Ceviche (raw scallops) special. My guest opted for the lobster spring roll. We also decided to try the shrimp Maki roll special. Our waiter took our order, left us to enjoy each other's company, and was magically off to place our order.

The appetizers were artistically presented. The Ceviche is served in a martini glass with a salsa like sauce on it. It amazed me that the waiter had the ability to balance such a dish in his hands. With my fork in hand, I delicately took a bite. The taste was so unbelievably good. This was an absolutely wonderful dish. Generally speaking, I consider myself someone that eats too fast. This dish made me want to slow down however because I wanted to savor every last second so that my palate could enjoy the unique taste of this particular dish.

The lobster spring rolls were cut and cooked to perfection. They look so much like a piece of art, you feel guilty to be tasting something so special. I suddenly get the feeling that at Jean Luc East, you are being treated very special. The Maki rolls were also perfect. The sushi roll was cut with incredible precision, the shrimp extremely fresh. The real spectacular part about this dish however, is the wasabi sauce. It is smooth, tasty and goes with each piece the way an olive goes with a martini.

"What would you like as your entree sir?" Our waiter asked.

"I'll have the halibut, just for the halibut." I quickly responded.

I decided to go with the fish entrée because I know how difficult it is to prepare. My guest ordered the salmon. The food came out, again, like a piece art. The fish was cooked to perfection, the salmon with panca chili and citrus sauce and spinach was delicious. The halibut with a startling delicious crabmeat crust, cous cous, and salsa was outstanding. Everything was so wonderfully delicious, not to mention healthy.

The meal was one of the best meals that I have ever had in my entire life. Full and satisfied we decided to split the dessert. We both agreed on the profiteroles which is a light crust surrounding vanilla ice cream, chocolate ganache sauce, and toasted almonds. Need I say more? It was outstanding!

Appetizers and salads range from $8 to 16, entrée's from $12 to $29 and desserts from $8 to $12.

What Jean Luc has done with this perfect location off of Montauk Highway is incredible. The great space, outstanding service and the food at Jean Luc East is more than you would expect. I highly recommend dining there.

Dining In The Hamptons

American Bistro

2495 Main St.Bridgehampton, NY

(631) 537-5665.

Enjoy a delectable American experience at the corner of Main Street and Ocean Road in Bridgehampton at the American Bistro. From the American flag that hangs proudly over the kitchen door, to the red and white furniture and waiters dressed in blue denim, it is true Americana.

Modernist square paintings line the walls and thick oak and glass doors open to create a pleasant breeze with an enjoyable view. The spacious interior is designed to create a perfect amount of privacy for each table. The setting is moderately formal, with enough flexibility to meet the needs of any diner. While many get dressed up for the occasion in collared shirts and khakis, others dress more casually.

Veteran East End chef, Riccardo Translavina and owner Frank Gemino, have worked together to create a reasonably priced menu that include all the American favorites.

Appetizers are heavily centered on seafood. Simplicity works wonderfully with traditional options like shrimp cocktail, crispy fried calamari, crab cakes and steamed clams in a delicious white wine with garlic and tomato sauce. The tomato bread salad with sliced cucumbers has a colorful presentation and a subtly tangy flavor.

Entrees of sandwiches include choices such as grilled chicken with fresh mozzarella and pesto in addition to roasted peppers and goat cheese. My entrée of choice was the sautéed monkfish, served in a light cream sauce. The tender fish is topped with sautéed tomatoes and salty capers for contrast and a touch of zest. The perfect combination of these flavors leaves you feeling more than satisfied.

The penne with fresh tomato, basil and garlic is perfectly aldente. The freshness of the sauce leaves your mouth with a subtle hint of tomato garlic taste. Another classic dish is the famous American burger. The tasty, lean meat is served with homemade coleslaw and the Bistro's renowned French fries. Additional options include bacon, sautéed onions and mushrooms.

Dessert is a must. Their well-rounded assortment includes a number of tempting offerings. Raspberry tart is very impressive. The sugar-lined plate is beautifully presented with strawberries and blueberries garnishing the side of the dish, served warm with tasty vanilla ice cream. Each bite of sweet raspberries is accented with a slight cinnamon flavor and the creamy coconut ice cream is a sultry delight.

Prices at the American Bistro are reasonable, ranging from twelve to twenty-six dollars. The restaurant now offers a wonderful prixe fixe special of twenty dollars. With a choice of mixed greens or soup, you can get fish, grilled pork chops, cold poached salmon, penne, roasted chicken, or sautéed calf liver. Coffee or tea is complimentary with this meal.

Side Dish By Aji Jones

Don't forget about the first annual Long Island Wine Classic, taking place at the Hampton Classic grounds in Bridgehampton tomorrow August 23rd. This kick off party for the horse show, which runs from August 24th to the 31st, is sponsored by the Wine Spectator. All proceeds will go to benefit the three Eastern Long Island Hospitals. East End chefs such as Jason Weiner of Almond, James Carpenter of Della Femina, Omar Bueso of H2O Seafood Grill, Craig Jermin of Tellers and Todd Jacobs of Tierra Mar will be in attendance, serving up some delicious samples for all hungry ticket holders. Cost is $400 for dinner and grand tasting package and $150 for the grand tasting only. This first time event will focus on the special relationship between Long Island food and Long Island wines so don't miss out. For further information or for tickets, visit www.liwineclassic.com or call 537-3177.

Congratulations are again in order for Nick & Toni's who are celebrating their 15th anniversary this Sunday. This invite only party will raise money for the East Hampton Community Council, The Children's Aid Society and the Incontinentia Pigmenti International Foundation. Many famous Nick & Toni regulars and alums are sure to attend, so keep an eye on this space for all the celebrity sightings.

Babette's in East Hampton has announced they will be offering for purchase, tickets to the upcoming Friends of Hillary Clinton Benefit and Reception. Senator Clinton will be in attendance. The fundraiser is scheduled to take place this Sunday between 5:00 and 7:00 p.m. at the Bridgehampton home of Ellen Chesler and Matt Mallow. Tickets for the benefit are $250 per person. For more information contact Babara Layton at Babette's – 329-5377.

Zagat 2003 says The 1770 House Restaurant & Inn is "The best newcomer on Long Island." This quaint East Hampton eatery also received a rating of 25 for food, 24 for décor, and 23 for service. Chef Kevin Penner is the culinary mastermind. Open every night at 6p.m. Call 324-1770 for details.

Serving one of two prix fixe dinners four nights a week, Café Max in East Hampton has dinner deals that wont empty your wallet. Sunday and Thursday enjoy a two course meal for $20, or try the $22.50 three course special on Mondays and Wednesdays. Sushi is available Fridays and Saturdays. Also, when dining at Café Max you wont want to forget the wine. Café Max is a Wine Spectator award winner, and has been every year since 1995. Call 324-2004 for more info.

Celebrating their 20th season in business Mirko's Restaurant is still serving delicious meals Tuesday through Sunday. This eatery located in the Water Mill Square has outdoor dining available. With quotes from Zagat 2003 like "Mirkos #1 in the Hamptons" its not surprising that Mirko's is still going strong after twenty years. Call 726-4444.

If you're planning a party to wrap up this summer and you want it done right, you'll probably be looking for a good catering company. The Hampton Clam Bake and Catering Company located in East Hampton can plan a great clam and/or lobster bake for you and your friends - on the beach, or right in your own back yard. Call 324-8620 or log on to www.hamptonclambake.com. If you're in the mood for something a little more chic to wrap up the season, then try Mazzu's Catering in Water Mill. Mazzu's will do everything from elegant dinner parties to romantic beach picnics for two. They also serve fresh homemade pastries for dessert. Call 726-2044 for details.

In case you didn't already know Q a Thai Bistro on Noyac Road in Southampton is open for dinner at 5 p.m. seven days a week. Serving a bento box special (for two) Sunday through Thursday 5 to 7 p.m. for $28.95, Q also offers an outdoor patio for your dining pleasure, as well as a posh lounge for when you want to enjoy a cocktail. Call Q a Thai Bistro at 204-0007.

TOM VALENTI'S
HAMPTON RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Late Season Berry Compote

2 lbs berries (straw, blue or black) – if strawberries, remove stems and cut in thirds
1/3 cup MacNut™ Oil
1/2 cup sugar
zest of 1 lemon
Fresh squeezed juice of 1/2 lemon
1/4 cup white wine
1 tablespoon Brandy

In a medium sauté pan, heat the oil over low heat; add the berries and stir. Add the sugar, zest, lemon juice, white wine and the brandy and gently combine. Toss well and cook for 15-20 minutes until all the liquid has evaporated and the mixture is thick. Cool thoroughly and transfer to a jar.

This will keep for up to two weeks. It can be used over ice cream, toast in the morning or with pound cake. You can make a coupe with the pound cake by layering the cake with the compote and whip cream in a pilsner glass.

We at MacNut Oil™ hope you have enjoyed some of Tom Valenti's summer recipes. Look for more delicious and healthy MacNut Oil™ "Hamptons Diet" recipes on our web site at www.macnutoil.com and in the April book release of The Hamptons Diet by Fred Pescatore, MD.

Tom Valenti is Chef & Owner of Ouest, NYC.

MacNut™ Oil is available at Second Nature Markets (East Hampton and Southampton), Barefoot Contessa (East Hampton), Westhampton Natural Foods, Citarella (all locations), Grace's Marketplace, Health Nuts, Gourmet Garage and Zabar's (NYC).

Dining In The Hamptons

Oakland's Restaurant & Marina

Dune Road at The Shinnecock Inlet
631-728-6900

Oakland's Restaurant and Marina, a haven for a delightful meal on the Shinnecock Bay, sits right alongside the inlet and welcomes all who enjoy a relaxed coastal atmosphere with their food and drink. Family owned and managed for the past twelve years, Oakland's is definitely a classy local place that should not be overlooked, especially with the tasty creations that the Chef de Cuisine, John Hill, makes happen in the kitchen.

Whether you are the person indefinitely searching for a restaurant with a great ambiance or if you simply enjoy moderately priced, but marvelously-tasty food, Oakland's can truly satisfy both of your cravings. Further, if you enjoy dining in the fresh sea air on the back deck, you will find that the marina truly creates a picture worth a thousand words. The peaceful dancing of the sunlight along the rippling water as the boats glide past is sure to keep you happily entranced before your food is served.

If you prefer, you can always sit down at the tiki bar outside for a drink before your meal, or you can have the friendly waitperson bring you anything you'd like. The beverage list includes everything from tap beer to an extensive wine list, both of local North and South Fork vintages as well as domestic and imported red, white, and blush. Sparkling wine and champagne are also available to go with the bread brought to your table.

Starting with a salad, you have your choice of a caesar, a house salad with a great apple balsamic vinaigrette, or a marvelous spinach salad topped with sliced Portobello mushrooms, creamy goat cheese and an apple smoked bacon vinaigrette. The dressings on all three are very impressive, so make your choice dependant on what your taste-buds enjoy most.

Having sampled an assorted variety of appetizers and entrees off the lunch and dinner menus, I sincerely found everything to be excellent, probably since Chef John Hill goes out of his way to buy food locally or off boats and accentuates it with herbs that he grows in his own garden. And although the most popular dishes are ones of the sea, the restaurant does serve chicken and steak meals as well as ones for the non-carnivorous and children.

Some of the dishes that should not be missed include the wonderfully crispy crab cakes served with a great sour corn-mango chutney that is delightfully light and sweet, and the Southwestern BBQ style spare ribs, which come with a lovely shrimp bell pepper empanada. Also, the calamari have a unique yellow-tomato sauce for dipping, although I must admit that my favorite appetizer was definitely the delicate half-seared tuna in a lemongrass oil, served with delicious gingered eggplant dumplings, wasabi and soy syrup.

Without question, my number one dish on the entire menu would have to be the corn-crusted salmon which utterly melts in your mouth. If you are a salmon lover, I beckon you to try this wild filet of salmon topped with sweet corn powder, avocado, crispy applewood bacon and bell pepper salsa. It is to die for.

But realize that it may be worth your while to save room for one of the yummy desserts that you have to pick from. You can have your choice of tiramisu, fresh berry cheesecake, or even the Crème Brulee Du Jour. Just as a warning for you chocolate lovers, the Triple Chocolate Caramel Tart is a dream come true and will surely keep you smiling for the rest of your day.

So without a doubt, this is a beautiful place to dine on a lovely sunny day or warm summer evening, with just a light breeze off the water to rustle up your tresses. But ladies, I do recommend wearing your hair tied back if you plan to sit on the deck so that you can focus all of your energies on the scrumptious food. Or you can always opt to sit at the indoor dining area, which is a tad bit more formal.

The restaurant is open everyday for lunch and dinner starting at noon. And if you enjoy live music, you can listen to some live tunes from Friday to Tuesday evenings at the tiki bar. Overall, the most popular times to visit are lunches on weekends by boat (you can tie up for free) and dinnertime, as with most restaurants. But whatever time you chose to come, Oakland's truly is a great place for a great meal. And as my mother always said, "You can always tell if a seafood restaurant is worth trying if there are fishermen that can be spotted chowing there—it's their specialty." And you can be sure that you'll see both one-time visitors as well as local regulars at Oakland's Restaurant and Marina. Check it out for yourself. – Clara Jablonski

Confessions of a Restaurateur

This is the third and final part of a column (originally written in August of 2002) on how a Chinese water torture in the form of periodic power outages created under LIPA have influenced my readiness to divest myself from my restaurant and turn my full time attention to my family.

Did I tell you? We closed the restaurant for a month in January of 2001. Took the kids out of school and went to St. Martin and St. Barths. Since I had no one to call at work, I was perfectly relaxed. I closed everything. Emptied the walk-in boxes, turned off all the equipment. The only power on was for an apartment upstairs above the restaurant where two people lived with their nice one room apartment which probably consisted of three lights and a TV.

A week or so after we returned from vacation a LIPA bill appeared on my desk. I was curious to see how much money I had saved for the month I was closed so I opened it. I was shocked. My normal monthly bill would run approximately $3300. This bill, with the apartment with the three lights and nothing else, was $3150. A savings of $150!

I called LIPA. I went to see LIPA. I even wrote to LIPA. No luck; no dice. That was the bill. They were sorry but this was the correct bill. Something about a Demand Meter, peak hours, etc. Said I had to shut down the entire building. I said I did. The idea that my already overpriced vacation now cost me an additional $3000 was very disturbing. I allowed as how this wouldn't be the case if there was an alternative power company as competition for LIPA. He allowed that that was correct. I decided to fight. I wouldn't pay the bill. I'll pay everything else but that month. I'll show them. They can't do this to me.

I was wrong, of course. They could do what they pleased. "Custers Last Stand" lasted about eighteen months. This past late September a squat lady with an official looking brown and tan LIPA jacket appeared in my office on a Friday afternoon with some official looking papers. "You owe me $3150 plus $6623 in security deposits." I told her why I wasn't paying and she said, "fine, I'm going to turn your power off." I said "when?" and she said, "NOW". I paid her.

Gov. Pataki is a frequent guest at our restaurant. On two of his early visits he actually asked me if I had yet felt the positive effects (financially) of the LIPA takeover from LILCO. On another visit he asked if I was happy with the new and improved service. The Governor is a good friend of my cousin and I decided not to tell him any of my LIPA stories. I wanted to. I should have.

It is Saturday morning, August 24th. It's cooled off somewhat; an indication that the summer of 2002 is winding down. I have discreetly contacted a couple of brokers about selling my restaurant. The knot is still resting uncomfortably in my stomach even though my pleasant trip to camp the prior week is still fresh on my mind. (Seeing my kids in color war was glorious.) I was able to locate Susan and the kids, who by now were wending their way back from Maine by way of Montreal. I laughed when I found out that Matthew, the love child, had been teasing Andrew, the "jock," about being on the losing side of color war. I wanted to be there. I wanted to be part of the family banter.

A broker called back and asked if I was serious about selling. I hesitated and gave a wishy-washy answer.

Restaurateur (continued from previous page)

The day passed rapidly and I made several more calls to the kids in Montreal. At five o'clock I went into my apartment to watch the end of the Mets game. I was sure this was the day the losing streak would end. Turning the TV on was the signal for me to doze off; which I did.

At 5:32 the unthinkable happened. Thud! No lights. No power. Again! Even though this time the power went back on in five minutes, this was no longer fun. This was it. You win, LIPA. I didn't want to be here. I thought of my family and thought of the old story where Abe is on his death bed talking to his wife, his partner and his kids and he says: "I should have spent more time in the office." Nonsense. NOT! That never happens and that was the point. If I was smart I wouldn't let that happen to me. I couldn't do this anymore. The allegory of LIPA was coming between me and my sanity. I'm sure this wasn't as bad as I made it seem. But to me it was and I told myself that that is the point.

This I fear has become a business for someone younger than me. I didn't want to admit it. I loved it, I was good at it. We were successful. I had made a ton of friends and made a lot of people happy. It seems it is time though. Someone is trying to tell me something. It is time to move on. Seize the moment. I'll become a perfect consultant for a new owner. At all costs I can't be the guy who spent too much time at the office. I want my family, first and foremost, to be successful; not my business. LIPA, I want you to know I'm angry and I'm not going to take it anymore!

And so I made a decision, .finally, on October 24, 2002. My fantasy ad reads: There is a really good, successful, and attractive restaurant available. It comes with a ton of positive things.....and LIPA. Don't call a broker. Call me: 324-8585.

On May 19, 2003, I signed a contract to sell the Farmhouse; pending a liquor license and other normal nuances when you do a deal in ten days.

Footnote: None of us wil lsoon forget the now famous and extensive "blackout" of August 14, 2003, which has made all of us feel vulnerable. I will also remember that on Saturday night, August 16th, only two days later, East Hamptons' power went out for an hour. What went wrong and how can we prevent it from happening again?

Unabashed Tout of the Week: Station Bistro is located next to the railroad tracks in Watermill way behind Blockbusters,. The place, unfortunately hard to find, serves up the best breakfast anywhere in a casual but elegant setting. Dinner too. Cheap too. Danny the owner used to be located at the Poxobogue golf course until he was caught in the politiccal crossfire between the town and golf course owners. From there he went across the street to Allison's which predictably didn't work out. Now he's an owner in Watermill. Go say hello and have a great time.

WHERE DID THE SUMMER GO?

As the 2003 summer season nears the end, we want to say "thank you" to all of our wonderful customers who have made this summer so rewarding and special.

AND WHY DOES IT HAVE TO END?

Tide Runners will keep the momentum going as we continue to serve dinner 7 days in the month of September, from 4pm till 10 pm and lunch on Saturdays and Sundays from 12 noon till 3:30pm

We will keep you posted on our fall and winter hours.

Tide Runners is available for private parties, weddings and holiday gatherings so keep us in mind when booking your next event

Thank you for your continued patronage and support and we look forward to seeing you again soon!

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MOVIES ON MY MIND: "STRANGER IN THE VILLAGE" AT GUILD HALL *Part 11

Last week's critique of Richard Prince proved his infinity for cinema. No less a connection exists with Guild Hall's current show, "Stranger in the Village." While the MOMA-curated exhibit did not confront the relationship between artists and movies, there are several examples which give a different perspective to the display, demonstrating how both the visual and moving arts reinforce a creator's themes.

For that reason alone, it would have been provocative, indeed, to present films by the exhibiting artists as a separate venue (and we don't mean the William Kentridge documentary played in the library).

Consider Mr. Kentridge, a South African artist and animator. His documentary was much more explicit in explaining his political asethetic bent; from the work that was exhibited at Guild Hall, the viewer would have no clue whatsoever regarding his intense and important themes, even though the drawing came from one of Mr. Kentridge's films.

For example, the single piece could not possibly show his animation process: the drawing of one image and its erasure and replacement with another image. A montage of drawings would have been more appropriate, therefore. Such a process signifies the trace that the images leave, just as South African politics have continued to leave its own mark.

Cindy Sherman's photograph featuring a seemingly dead woman lying in the grass could very well be a publicity still from a movie: Ms. Sherman's theatricality and play acting are well known. Her movie, Office Killer, is not. But there are comparisons to be made. The photographed female could well be the victim of the film's murdering protagonist, Carol Kane. More to the point is the style: both the photograph and the movie experimented with Expressionism.

Another artist who makes movies, Mathew Barney, also demonstrates common qualities with his drawing "Stadium" and his Cremaster movie celebrating the Gary Gilmore story (Gilmore was the subject of Norman Mailer's The Executioner's Song. ) There's no denying the recurring use of clear plastic in both his drawings and the film. Such material was also primary in Barney's sculptural display at his recent Guggenheim Museum exhibit.

Finally, Bruce Nauman's multiple photographs (combined into one image) feature a pyramid of animals recalling Nauman's multiple video projections, each image changing with movement.

The show will be on view until October 27.

CRITIC'S CHOICE:

A movie series, ARTISTS ON FILM: FROM PAGE TO SCREEN, will be featured every Friday nigh in September at the Ross School. Provocative after screening discussions led by Marion WolbergWeiss. Sept. 5: THE HORSE'S MOUTH with Alec Guinness. Call the Pollock Krasner House for info: 631-324-4929.

Honoring the Artist: Alicia Rothman

While Brooklyn resident and artist Alicia Rothman makes it sound easy, her horse paintings are a product of technique as well as attention to movement. And while she says she doesn't attach any importance to the psychological aspects of her images, we surmise there's a great deal of emotion she feels for her subjects.

Take this week's cover poster for the Hamptons Classic, for example. Two horses are grouped together; a third animal is entering as if to join them. This is where Ms. Rothman's signature sense of movement comes in. The fact that the images are black and white demonstrates the artist's evocation of mystery while also still keeping the horses' natural gracefulness.

Finally, each animal seems to possess a unique personality, even if Ms. Rothman denies any preconceived notions regarding such personalities, explaining that "I'm just focused on the painting's technical aspects."

There's another trait that the artist included in the poster: her penchant for pattern. "People say I establish a Byzantine mood with the patterns, " Ms. Rothman offers. "But besides that, I love to capture movement; that's why I have done so many works with dancers, from ballet to modern. I know dancers and see a lot of performances. Dancers have become a muse."

Ms. Rothman always had a general interest in the arts and specificaly the depiction of horses in visual art while calling Queens home. Such interest was nutured by her mother (who took her to lots of museums and who was herself an art teacher and artist).

Atttending the High School for Music and Art added to Ms. Rothman's love of art as did her experience at Harper College in Binghamton where she first got her crack at drawing horses, particularly a horse's skull which a friend had found. But Ms. Rothman's training went beyond that when she pursued a MFA in printmaking from Indianna University.

"I decided not to stay in the Midwest,"she admitted. "I wouldn't live some place where there were no galleries. So I came back to New York, working in printmaking; I also had time to do my own work."

For the last twenty years, Ms. Rothman has lived in Brooklyn where she pursues her work and travels to places like Amsterdam. "The light is so beautiful there," she adds. " I'd also love to visit India and Thailand where Byzantine art is important" Ms. Rothman continues. "But most of all, I'd want to make sure I keep doing what I'm doing until the day I die."

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Here in boat heaven, Newport, Rhode Island, one might think the overly-wealthy ghosts of the Astors and Vanderbilts and other early "summer" people are still holding sway over the proprieties of the town when you find that the local library's dictionary does not include the word, swat. Since a fly swatter can crush a fly, and, I've heard of Babe Ruth, the Sultan of Swat, I'd an idea but it doesn't appear in their dictionary. Must be too slangy or, unpleasant. I was curious after seeing the movie version of TV's 1970's series, S.W.A.T. and found it stands for Special Weapons and Tactics Team – a bunch of guys in blue-covered, heavy armor and use weapons as big as Howitzer cannons. Naturally, they fit, very nicely, into the sun-baked-brain town where 4 foot, 6 inch tall actor, Gary Coleman can challenge a bulging, brick house built, body of action hero movies and, an action heroine of porn flicks, along with about 35 other tanned and bikini waxed residents of Los Angeles in a recall/bake-off to replace the current Governor. It's comforting to know that the heavy hitting S.W.A.T. forces will be there to cope with the melee of the Angeleno contenders taking on the 100 or so, challengers from the rest of the state. Of the current, S.W.A.T. movie someone said, "It's not a bad way to kill two hours." I think I can say that it is probably more entertaining than killing flies. But, it depends on what you're into.

Doing the really nasty jobs as S.W.A.T. personnel and, as actors are Samuel L. Jackson and, Colin Farrell, two very superior performers who must be sore as heck from the back-firing nature of their roles. (For the retro-minded, these are the characters portrayed by Steve Forrest and, Robert Urich, And, back by popular demand is the original theme music,) LL Cool J (James Todd Smith) and, Josh Charles are also men in iron and blue making BANG-BANG in time to the music. Storywise, the book is a heavily padded Television episode but, the padded armor is mostly kapok and there's no blue material. S.W.A.T. is rated PG-13. Much is brought up of spiritual and family values. You know, redemption-of the Food Stamps variety-Good vs Evil. In keeping with the current trend, a Frenchman is the Big Bad Guy. He's put up $100 million to anyone who can get him out of prison. Little Bad guys will try. The S.W,A,T.S have to keep them from not. A new member of the team is a woman. Girlfight's Michelle Rodrigues, now fighting in rounds of ammunition. Oh yeah. You might bring ear plugs.

In Le Divorce, the French are treated as such awful types, the Bush Team might have Rumsfeld pin an especially struck medal on the chests of the already well decorated team of Merchant and Ivory and Jhabvala, who have given movies a distinct touch of class with period, tea and sympathy classics wherein the drama is of the "tempest in a very fragile teapot" kind. Unfortunately, when this sort of storytelling is about a modern-day, flimsy trifle, their style becomes just a tempest in a teapot – like instant Lipton Iced Tea served in bone china. It's not only ho-hum but, why? What's the big deal?

Here's the deal: Kate Hudson is a pert Californian newly arrived in Paris, who, according to the 1997 novel by Diane Johnson, immediately falls into a bed and love affair with Thierry Lhermitte, as a courtly French diplomat and twice her age - at least. At most, he's a cad and, takes his conquest proudly into the open. O.K. all around because she is on top of it and loves it. However, as stirred-up in the Ivory teapot, it's a swirling, tempest-tossed family affaire tres mauvais, involving her expatriate poet sister, Naomi Watts, pregnant and left holding the bag by her Gallic husband (a cad,'natch) Melvil Poupand. But, wait! His mother, Leslie Caron, is conniving to get the sisters' valuable, family painting that could be a Georges de la Tour. Ooh, la-la! With Le Divorce of Watts and Poupand, who will get how much of the paintings worth? But, is it worth anything? Mme. Caron's snobby matriarch is very worthy, as is Thomas Lennon's flippant work as the girls' brother. He makes the tough problems of being in France a lark. Maybe Kate's way of dealing with French decadence is the best way: Lie back and enjoy it. The high civility of the hi gloss whiteness of Ivory and the expansive sales-worthy Merchant hinders the fun, but, heck, go ahead. Fake it.

theater review: the exonerated

This is potent theater but it is not one dramatic narrative with an auxilliary theme or two. It is the real experiences of six innocent Americans railroaded onto death row through a lethal blend of incompetent or overly zealous police, prosecutors, defense attorneys, prison guards, jailhouse snitches and judges mixed with the accuseds' non-existent finances and naivete.

Through a miraculous combination of their faith and newly-revealed-evidence, the six are exonerated and released after years of incarceration. The Exonerated is, thus, a play about hope, redemption and forgiveness.

It is based on interviews, court transcripts and depositions taken by married actor/playwrights Jessica Blank and Erik Jensen in 2000 and fashioned into a powerful play. The Exonerated debuted at Tim Robbins' Actors Gang Theatre in New York City in the spring of 2002. With a black stage and set, the cast sits in a row on high chairs and faces the audience; they are lighted from above when they speak. At the Long Island premiere in East Hampton's Guild Hall last week, Kerry Max Cook, the exonerated prisoner who served the longest term on death row–22 years–spoke his own words in his scenes.

The six innocents the play depicts are Gary Gauger, an organic farmer wrongly convicted of murdering his parents; Robert Hayes, a black racetrack worker incarcerated for murdering a white woman; Terry Max Cook, a teenager framed for murdering a woman in his apartment complex; Sunny Jacobs, a young mother wrongly convicted of murdering two policemen; David Keaton, a black teenage football player falsely convicted of robbery and murder; and Delbert Tibbs, an intelligent college dropout incarcerated for a rape and murder of people he had never even met.

A cast of accomplished actors portrayed five of the exonerated. Montel Williams was forceful and strong as the radicalized activist Delbert Tibbs: "If I internalized all the hurt and pain [of the wrongful incarceration], they wouldn't have to execute me. I'd be dead already."

As the black horse-groomer Robert Earl Hayes, Billy Dee Williams shows the living death of a man who knows he doesn't have a chance when accused of murdering a white woman in the southern U.S. "Prison took away my spark for life" and, after a pro bono lawyer takes up his case and eventually wins his freedom on an appeal, "I had to find my spirituality again." He is barred from the work he loves with horses because he is a "convicted" felon.

Mia Farrow was straightforward and totally believable as the hippy, vegetarian Sunny Jacobs who is framed, along with her common-law husband Jesse, for murdering two Florida policemen. Her husband's ex-con acquaintance Walter Rhodes did the killings and recants his testimony against the couple in 1990 after Jesse is horribly executed in the malfunctioning Florida electric chair. Sunny is on death row from 1976 to 1992 but, after exoneration, somehow finds a strength within herself to lead a productive life.

Chad Coleman is extremely moving as the young, athletic, religious David Keaton held incommunicado by northern Florida police for a week while they threatened and badgered him into confessing to a robbery and murder. Actor Danton Stone is quiet and calm as Gary Gauger, the northern Illinois farmer completely traumatized when he discovers both his parents murdered. He is numb when interrogators take his hypothetical account and use it as his "confession." Two motorcycle gang members later confessed to the murders and a Northwestern University law professor and students won Gary an appeal and finally an exoneration.

Kerry Max Cook, now in his mid 40s, married and with a young child, hesitantly told his story of being framed for murder and incarcerated on death row at 22. He kept his emotions under control as he related living through 221 Texas executions, seeing his idolized older brother die trying to save him, being raped and constantly beaten by other inmates and trying to kill himself. "I wasn't a street thug. I wasn't trash. I came from a nice family. It can happen to anybody. It can happen to you."

Amelia Campbell and Schantelle Cason were convincing in multiple roles as the prisoners' wives, lawyers and judges. Larry Block and Jim Bracchitta were very powerful in their roles as policemen and prosecutors of the different cases.

Bob Balaban directed the six interwoven stories with great finesse so that each personality is distinct and memorable. He is aided by Tom Ontiveros' stark set and lighting, and David Robbins' original music and sound design.

At the 9:30 p.m. Saturday performance, Montel Williams, speaking Delbert Tibbs' words, was overcome when he said, "The biggest adjustment after getting out is learning to feel again." (He was comforted by Ms. Farrow and embraced by Kerry Cook during the curtain calls.)

None of The Exonerated received any compensation from the states that wrongly imprisoned them. It amazes that they all now lead productive lives, but the play is a clarion call to remember there are many rotten apples–and innocent prisoners–entangled in our flawed criminal justice system.

The Exonerated opened to critical acclaim at the 45 Bleecker St. Theater in Greenwich Village last fall. Directed by Bob Balaban, the production continues there with a changing cast of fine actors.

preview: is it really me?

Brenda Siemer never thought of herself as a documentary filmmaker, especially one concentrating on female issues, but when she voluntarily cared for her widowed mother afflicted with Alzheimer's disease, "I realized that I had changed from the child to the nurturer." From her experience of living with and caring for an Alzheimer's victim for 14 years, Siemer and film editor Emma Morris created the award-winning documentary I Know A Song.

When pregnant with son Christian, now 15, and her mother had recently died, Siemer began to have wider thoughts. "What is the value of being a woman? Where does the sixth sense or intuition that women seem to have come from? I realized I wanted to explore all aspects of what it means to be feminine."

She took her inner musings and began questioning accomplished women she knew to learn how they lived their lives and dealt with feminity. One of the women she spoke with is singer/dancer/choreographer Ann Reinking, a friend since they roomed together during the run of the musical 1776 more than 30 years ago.

Siemer flew to Tampa's University of South Florida in July 1999 to film Reinking's popular performance workshop which attracts budding actors, singers and dancers from all over the world. She documented Gwen Verdon (one of the guest instructors that summer) and Reinking working with the students, and she interviewed several of them. Both teachers and pupils talked on camera about the insecurities they face while growing up. The adults try to guide them to mature as artists and women.

The result of that trip is Siemer and Morris's latest film, Is It Really Me? The 27-minute documentary will be shown on Friday, September 5, at East Hampton's Guild Hall and a panel discussion, "Body Battles," will follow the screening. Ann Reinking, Brenda Siemer, Molly Ahrens (founder of Bryn Mawr College's Body Image Council) and psychologist Dr. Celia Ford will lead a discussion with the audience on how teenage girls look at their bodies, what it means to become a woman, and how the body defines who one is or becomes.

Meeting the 5'10" blonde, svelte, graceful Ms. Siemer, a former model, it is a shock to think she ever questioned her feminity. "Growing up in Buffalo, I was a tomboy and athletic, so I never thought of myself in terms of feminity. I was tall and never had a date in high school.... I never thought of myself as attractive, even when I was modeling. I was just a thin frame the designers, makeup people, hair stylists and photographers fixed up to their liking. My body size was determined by genetics."

Today, "I am a visual artist and so I use color and image to explore who I am and what I see in the world.... My body is a canvas and, even though my mother was a well-educated, adventurous lady who gave me a great sense of freedom, I really didn't have any instruction on how to be a woman."

Despite a successful modeling career, then living and working in Los Angeles as an actress, meeting and marrying actor Roy Scheider, creating a family and home with him in Sagaponack, and taking an active role in their children's lives, "I still find that I am constantly exploring who I am."

Brenda Siemer now feels her two documentaries will be part of a series she calls "Woman's Way," which will explore how women cope with living in a male-oriented culture. Is It Really Me? won a Cine Award this year. Ms. Siemer formed Sister Productions to produce this and all future documentaries. The company's logo is a formal "S" imposed over handwoven cloth symbolizing the many threads of a woman's life. She wants her films to explore the concept of what is feminine, starting with ancient cultures and continuing to the present.

The screening of Is It Really Me? and following panel discussion are in the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Friday, September 5, starting at 8 p.m. Admission is $20 for adults and $10 for students. Tickets can be reserved by calling the Guild Hall box office at 631-324-4050. –Jan Silver

The Memory Motel in Montauk is best known for it's portrayal in the Rolling Stones song of the same name. If you know anything about anything you know that the song was written at and about Montauk's own, and no other in the world. James Patterson also thought it to be a place special enough to have his book "The Beach House" take place mostly set in it. Some of you may simply realize it's just a great place to jam. The live music is awesome and the bar is always packed. People are pouring out the doors. For Labor Day weekend they have great performers lined up. Starting with Thursday it's you and your friends for karaoke. On Friday check out the Black Stones. Thursday come on down for Hard Copy and on Sunday rock to Bluu. All shows start around 10:30 p.m. and are for all types of folk. Make sure to finish off your summer memories at the Memory

The biggest parties in Hamptons history will be happening this Labor Day weekend at CPI in Hampton Bays. ## Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

Labor Day weekend offers top-draw entertainers, but it's just a midpoint before the fine programs and performers coming this fall. The line-up for this weekend: The Four Lads (Fri.) and the great fusion rock band Little Feat (Sat.) at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center; acclaimed jazz violinist Regina Carter and quintet (Fri.) at Guild Hall followed by comediennes Joy Behar and Angela LaGreca (Sat.) and Theodore Bikel in a new-play reading (Sun.).

This is the last weekend to see the delightful musical The Boy Friend at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, and Bonnie Lee Sanders' new musical revue "Positive Influences" plays at Montauk Theatre Productions on Saturday. Gateway Playhouse's production of musical The King and I continues at the Patchogue Theatre. Musical headliners at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse this weekend are Suzanne Vega, Glenn Tillbrook and Martin Sexton.

Special events to enjoy are the Shinnecock Pow Wow and the Grand Prix weekend at the Hampton Classic Horse Show. For details on all of the above, read on:

THEATER and COMEDY

This is the last weekend to see Bay Street Theatre's lighthearted and lively production of Sandy Wilson's musical The Boy Friend, directed by Julie Andrews. It closes on Aug.31. Tickets ($50-60) are available at the box office (631-725-9500).

"An Evening with Joy Behar," the popular stand-up comedienne and co-host of ABC-TV's The View, includes a performance by the talented singer/actress/comedienne Angela LaGreca. They are both at Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Saturday at 8 p.m.($51-60, 631-324-4050).

On Sunday, Playwrights Theater of East Hampton and Pazer Productions present a staged reading of Stuart Warmflash's new comedy The Czar of Nothingness at Guild Hall. The cast is headed by screen and stage star Theodore Bikel, and the story concerns a widower shopowner whose life is disrupted when a street-smart young girl breaks into his store. Robert Kalfin directs, and there's an audience "talk back" with cast and director following the reading. The evening concludes with a dessert reception. For tickets ($18-20), call the box office at 631-324-4050.

Bellport's Gateway Playhouse is preparing for a run of the Maury Yeston/Arthur Kopit musical Phantom (Sept. 10-27) but its production of Rodgers & Hammerstein's The King and I continues at the Patchogue Theatre through Sept. 6. Call 631-286-1133 or 1-888-4TIX-NOW to reserve seats.

MUSIC

Acclaimed jazz violinist Regina Carter – who plays on a Guarneri violin! – will be at Guild Hall on Friday, Aug. 29, with her quintet to perform her blend of funk, African, Brazilian and soul jazz. (Wynton Marsalis chose her to be part of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.) The show starts at 8 p.m.; call 631-324-4050 for tickets ($40-45).

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center hosts two classic groups this weekend. On Friday, the smooth harmonies of The Four Lads ("No, Not Much," "Standing On the Corner") can be heard. The program starts at 8:30 p.m. and includes a special tribute to renowned Quogue songwriter Robert Allen, who wrote Johnny Mathis's big hits "Chances Are," "It's Not For Me To Say" and The Four Lads first big hit "Moments to Remember." Saturday night at 8:30 p.m., the rock band Little Feat will plays its mix of California rock and Southern style funk-boogie. For tickets to The Four Lads ($35-55) and Little Feat ($45-65), call the WHBPAC box office at 731-288-1500.

Singer/songwriter Bonnie Lee Sanders presents her musical revue "Positive Influences" at Montauk Theatre Productions Studio on Saturday at 8 p.m. It is her "take" on her many years in the music business writing for cabaret, country, contemporary and torch singers such as Eartha Kitt, ABBA, Hank Williams Jr. and The Muppets. Composer Joel Diamond is Bonnie's music director and accompanist for the revue. For tickets ($10), call the MTP Studio at 631-668-5656. On Sunday, several members of the East End Songwriters Guild will perform starting at 8 p.m.

Live music at local clubs and restaurants: Montauk – Guerney's Inn, Quinn's; Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse – Suzanne Vega followed by Nancy Atlas (Fri.), Glenn Tillbrook and Jill Sobule, then Dana Fuchs (Sat.), Martin Sexton (Sun. & Mon.); East Hampton – Jane Hastay and Peter Martin Weiss (Fri.) and Todd Michaels (Sat.) at Maidstone Arms; Sag Harbor – Hunky Page (Fri. & Sat.) at American Hotel, blues with Jim Turner at Peter Miller (Sun.); Bridgehampton

Galactic & The Radiators: Show Me The Music

The Radiators and Galactic will be rolling into the Hamptons over Labor Day weekend to play what will surely be one of the last-weekend-of-summer's best gigs. The show starts at 8 on Saturday, August 30 at Pinewood West Studios on 75 Industrial Road right near the East Hampton Airport. For tickets log on to jambasetickets.com or stop into Long Island Sound in East Hampton (324-2660) or Southampton (283-6683).

Dan's Papers took a few minutes to catch up with the bands and see what the bands had in store for the shows.

Galactic

Any thoughts about the Hamptons and playing out here?

It's definitely beautiful out there. We've been out there to play shows a few times and we always have a great time and the crowds have always been a blast to play for.

What have you guys been up to this summer?

We've been touring quite a bit. We're a few weeks into the tour right now and we have a few more weeks to go. We've been opening for Jeff Beck and playing with Mo Fro and it's been in really big theaters, which is amazing, but it's also nice to play a smaller place every once in a while.

Do you like touring and being on the road?

It's great to be on the road because you get to see different people play, you meet people all over the country and have a good time. On the flip side, it's always nice to be home, too.

What can we expect to hear when you guys play on Saturday night?

We're going to play some new material and just get up on stager and have a good time, and get the crowd going. It's going to be a great show and it'll be fantastic playing with the Radiators.

The Radiators

You were in the Hamptons last week and you'll be back again on Saturday night, so how was the crowd last week?

We've been playing there for 5 or 6 years. Clubs all have different feels. The audience was right on stage with us so the gig becomes a tribal thing. You get wired up and take the whole energy goes way beyond the actual space you're in.

Your bands been together 25 years and never broken up. What's the secret?

Separate hotel rooms!

It's been the five of us for all that time. I guess because it's like any good relationship. The conversation has never run out so we've never tired of each other. We've never run out of ideas or songs.

We have a songwriter who has written 1000's of songs – a vast storehouse. A lot of bands will play the same songs over and over again. We have a few hundred cover songs and have never repeated a set in 25 years – not one single night.

What artists are you listening to?

We have eclectic tastes – Japanese, Jam Bam, Gospel and Old Blues. You can't just listen to Rock-n-Roll because you'll start to sound generic and it will infiltrate your music. There will be a slant. If I've been listening to reggae I notice it'll come out that night at a show. I listen to Jelly Roll Martin. We'll listen and put something of him into the Radiators. Charlie Hunter, Modest Martin. I don't listen to the radio. It's like listening to one song.

What's your upcoming show have in store for the Hamptons crowd?

We never know just what we'll do. Depending on the audience we might scrap the first set list and wing it – go with the feel. All we can promise is that there will be 5 guys playing.

What's the worst question you get asked on a regular basis?

What kind of music do you do and what's fish head music?

What about the best question?

Unexpected questions that changes the perspective of the interview and engage us.

Has Paul McCartney dropped in to see you play?

No I don't think so but he's welcome. We played with Ringo a few years ago.

How does The Big Easy influence your music?

It's the best place for a musician to grow up. The whole culture is based on music and food. You're inundated with music as a kid. I wasn't a natural. I had to work at it. I started playing the sax and the clarinet in third grade. I couldn't believe when I saw some kids pick up a guitar for the first time and just go. Even funerals here are all about the music. Everyone here reads and plays music. The recording scene here in the 50's was amazing. We almost took Fat Richard and all those guys for granted – how big they were cause we loved 'em and they were right here. It's the only place in the world where you are in the catbird's seat if you play the tuba. Here kids kill to play the tuba. It's a real power play.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

The Beauty Secret

A few months ago I went to a famous Manhattan spa. It shall go unnamed. The basic facial cost me $100. I shelled out another $45 for my pedicure. My clean skin glowed for days and my toes sparkled in new summer sandals, but my wallet certainly suffered. I love my spa services, but I sure do hate their prices.

Since then, I've learned a beauty secret that I'd like to share. There is a place that offers beauty services at just a fraction of the typical spa prices. An aromatherapy facial costs $17; a basic manicure is $3. You can get fully groomed for less than the average New Yorker spends on her spa pedicure, and best of all, it's all available on your drive out to the East End. Intrigued? I'm sure.

It's called the Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty, and it has become my most recent beauty addiction. Located just minutes from exit 57 on the L.I.E., the Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty is the site of exceptional training for beauty professionals. It is also a place where customers get outstanding service for an outstanding price.

At the Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty, only those students who are days away from licensing are given the opportunity to work with clients. My aesthetician Christina made me feel comfortable immediately. She also had the hands of a goddess and the attention to detail of a neurosurgeon. And whereas aestheticians at other spas are often forced to skip over steps because of time constraints, at the Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty they are required to perform every step of a facial. You are certain to get a thorough treatment.

During my facial, Christina led me to a room filled with soft music and exotic smells. After my personal skin analysis, she set to work with Dermalogica products. Using an enzyme exfoliation and plankton mask, she soothed, nourished, and treated my combination skin. The hour-long session was pure relaxation and facial pampering at its best. The Gloria Francis Institute Beauty offers three other kinds of facials; I can't wait to try them all.

For a back treatment, Christina delivered a scrub that felt remarkably like a massage. My stress disappeared and my entire body felt clean and refreshed. A treatment like this would have cost me upwards of $85 anywhere else. At the Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty, it costs $20.

Finally, to end my day of pampering, I met with makeup artist Maria. I told her to go dramatic. Using Jane Iredale mineral cosmetics she transformed my look. We also talked about what colors I should use and different application techniques. I walked away with smoldering eyes, a perfect pout, and an increased awareness of what makeup can do.

Skin aglow and a smile planted freshly on my face, I knew that both my body and my check account were happy. The Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty is truly a beauty secret that's worth knowing.

Sessions are available on Mondays and Wednesdays at 10:30 a.m. and 1:00 p.m.

Gloria Francis Institute of Beauty is located at 11 Oval Drive, Suite 180 in Islandia, New York, 11749. For more information, call 631-582-4737

Summer Home Remedies

Please keep in mind that many of these are quick fixes and that outer beauty comes from Natural Vitamins, good food and lots of water.

Acne: Remember to clean places your face leans on like the telephone and pillow cases.

Deep Pore Cleanser: In a quart of boiling add: peel of 1/2 lemon, some herbs like Rosemary, thyme, basil, lavender etc. Remove the water from the stove. Cover your hair with a shower cap and using a towel make a tent over your head that the vessel holding your face about 6 inches from the heat. Steam your face 10 minutes. Immediately rinse with cold water and pat dry.

Dry Flaking Skin can be a sign of a deeper problem, see your doctor and have her check your blood sugar and thyroid.

Moisturize: with baby oil or mineral, you can always add scent if you want to. Creams clog pores, oils won't. Aloe Vera and mineral water will moisturize and heal skin.

Remove Dead Skin: Miracle Whip not mayonnaise removes dead skin. Rub in a small amount and let dry a few minutes. While the skin is slightly moist massage your face with your finger tips counter clockwise. Dead skin and Miracle Whip will roll right off. You can use this on other body parts such as knees and elbows as well.

Remove Pimple Redness: Rub a drip or two of Visine on the area. Works great!

Soften calluses on your feet by applying Vaseline and wearing a pair of clean white socks to bed.. in the morning when you shower, the right amount will wash away leaving your feet smooth all day.

Sun Burns: Aloe Vera juice, baking soda and water or apple cider vinegar. Aloe cools and relieves burned skin and heals it. Baking soda and water soothes and relieves. Apple cider vinegar cools and prevents blistering.

Dandruff Shampoo: Add 35 plain aspirin to a full bottle of your favorite shampoo.

Dry brittle hair: Take Potassium tablets.

Hair conditioner: Apply 1/2 cup of mayonnaise to unwashed hair, cover with a plastic bag and leave on for 20 minutes. Rinse several times before shampooing throughly. A good leave-in conditioner is favric softener diluted. 1/2 cup of softener to 1 cup of water. Put in a spray bottle.

Hot Oil Treatment: Rub olive oil, sesame oil or corn oil into hair and wrap yoru hair in plastic. weta towel thoroughly with the hottest water available and wring it out. Wrap it over the plastic for 15 minutes. Shampoo and rinse as usual.

Sun Lightener: Lemon of course is always good but try a little champagne in a squirt bottle, spritz hair while out in the sun.

Mascara: To keep wet mascara from smudging, close your eyes and blast your lashes or a couple of seconds with a cool blow dryer. Foundation: Always apply foundatin with foam sponge. Dampen a bit and put a drop of moisturizer on it as well.. then use your foundation.

Drying nails: If you haven't got a commercial nail dryer in a can, when nails are partially dry try running under cold water.

About Face.....with Annette

NEW AND NOTEWORTHY ITEMS

With the summers recent sweltering temperatures, artificial air and sun's glare, you have the perfect recipe for damaged skin. Sometimes you need a little zen in your life or perhaps even better.. some Zhen. "Zhen Cosmetics Tea Tree Collection is here to bring you that relief. Tea Tree Oil is renowned for healing and antiseptic properties making it the perfect weapon to undo summer damage," explains Susan Yee, president of Zhen, the industry leader for skin-care products for Asian women and women with yellow undertones, which at last check is a large percentage of the population! Tea Tree Collection was developed for women of all skin types, to achieve healthy skin all year round but most importantly in the months following summer. The collection includes a Facial Cleanser which gently cleanses and removes dirt and makeup while exfoliating dry, dead skin cells. The end result is a clear, glowing complexion. SRP $15. Tip: Wash with warm, not hot water during cooler months. Hot water strips the skin of its natural moisturizing lipids. The only mask you'll need for this season is Zhen's Tea Tree Facial Mask. Fast drying it unclogs pores and rids the skin of impurities. It combines Tea Tree Oil with Aloe Vera to soothe cranky post-summer skin. Use once a week to keep skin looking healthy and blemish free. SRP: $18. Tip: Use two to three times a week for oiler skin.

Just because fall is coming it doesn't mean you should skimp on the SPF. Zhen's Tea Tree Facial Creme contains an SPF of 25. Hmmm.. a good 10 points over most others. Simply apply to face in the morning and get protection and moisture all day long. SRP: $20. Zhen's Tea Tree Collection is available by visiting www.zhenbeauty.com or by calling 1-800-457-8455. Zen is located at over 125 Ultra Beauty locations nationwide.

Recently, President Bush designated September as Ovarian Cancer Awareness month. To show that it wholeheartedly backs this initiative, Delux Beauty has developed an education and fundraising program with Beauty.com. The company has created two new shades, Juicy Rose and Flirty Berry, of it's popular Junior Duo (SRP: $20) a velvety liquid cheek color and coordinating ultra-brilliant lip gloss in one sleek double-ended tube. During the month of September, 10% of retail sales of all Junior Duos (four shades in all) will be donated to Ovarian Cancer Research. Juicy Rose and Flirty Berry will be sold exclusively online at www.beauty.com.

Ovarian Cancer, known as the silent killer, is difficult to cure because it is often caught too late. More than 80% of the cases are detected at an advanced stage when the survival rate is only 25-35%. Statistics show that 1 in every 57 women in the US will develop Ovarian Cancer at some point in their lifetime. "Delux Beauty believes that it is our responsibility to help raise awareness and educate women about this disease," states Jillian Dempsey, the brands cofounder. Together, Delux and Beauty.com will help make a difference. Please visit the site and make a purchase. Help support their cause by making a purchase during the month of September. Thanks!

Take time and get a check up for yourself as well. Encourage others to get screened.. perhaps we can lower those statistics someday!

Home (continued from previous page)

Fuller Lips: Use two slightly different color of lip pencils, on the upper lip line and fill with the darker one and on the lower use the lighter. Smooth lipstick or gloss on top.

Change Mouth Shape: Line your lips with a beige pencil. Your natural lip line has a lightness right above it that you can cover when using darker colors. Beige creates the illusion of lightness so it looks natural.

Keep Lipstick color on: Using lip liner first under your lipstick will make it last longer. Or a drop of foundation makeup on your lips before applying lipstick will also extend it.

Bright Whites: Using blue pencils under the eye lid will make the whites of your eye much brighter.

Puffy, swollen eye lids: Moisten tea bags laid on the lids for 15 minutes or place cold cucumber slices on your eyelids. Actually anything cold on the eyes will work. Even lightly rubbing ice will also tighten pores and erase tiny lines.

Remember, all the cosmetics and lotions and potions cannot replace a healthy diet for making skin look it's best. Your skin is a dead give-away as to what your general overall health is.

About Gardening....with Annette

GARDEN AND HOME LIGHTING

Your house is pretty as a picture during the day, but what about at night? Some well placed outdoor lights might be just what the doctor ordered. By using a combination of lights around your property, you can create the effect of moonlight when the real thing has taken the night off. Under the eaves illumination can wash the side of your house with light, highlighting architectural features. And while you are creating a thing of beauty, you are enhancing security. No burglar can do his job successfully while in the spotlight. Or in an artificial moonlight for that matter. If security is your first concern, here is an idea: Install light on both sides and above the doorway so that the steps, door, house number and lock can easily be seen. If aesthetics is your motive, don't aim directional lighting at the front door if the view of any visitors will be obscured by the glare. House mounted or overhead lighting illuminates the face and body of the caller. Avoid direct glare on the visitor, and be sensitive to how it affects neighbors across the street. Low voltage lighting (12-volt) or energy saving halogen or krypton filled bulbs as low as 35 watts can keep the electricity bill on the low side. Consider solar lighting as well. In many cases, the initial investment in solar fixtures can be higher than that for conventional lighting, but costs over time are less. And solar lights permit more flexibility in layout because you do not have to depend on wiring.

Lighting should reflect your taste and the only rule of thumb is in designing, less light is more. Using lamps of less wattage prevents glare which is what you want to avoid. By using low wattage lights your eye is drawn to the result rather than the source of illumination.

Here are a few terms you ought to become familiar with.

Uplighting is illuminating an object, area, or surface from below. Walls, fences, bushes, and shrubs, and overhanging tree branches are likely candidates. Uplighting, which uses spotlights or floodlights, enhances the textures, sizes or color of trees or large plants.

Spotlighting uses a beam of light that is focused from above or below the object to draw attention to it, such as a steeple on a church. There can be a problem with glare, so most spotlights come with some sort of shield to reduce or eliminate it.

Downlighting is also called moonlighting. Lights might be mounted in a tree for example to soften the effect of the light on the ground surrounding the tree.

Shadowing is when the light source in front of an object projects a shadow on the surface, behind the object, such as a tree's shadow on the wall of a house.

Crosslighting is used to soften shadows, and entails using two or more fixtures from different angles.

Grazing is achieved when a light source is placed within 12 inches of the surface and the light beam is aimed parallel to that surface. For example: a stone or rough stucco house may look better when the textured surface is grazed by lighting.

Backlighting or silhouetting is achieved when a light is placed behind an object and aimed at the wall or other vertical surface behind the object.

If you live by the ocean, it's better to choice fixtures made of copper, brass or bronze with less than 20% nickel content to resist corrosion caused by the salt water. Figure out if it is a job you can do yourself. For higher voltage lighting you should consult a licensed electrician. Low voltage lighting typically includes some digging and some heavy lifting but it is not beyond the skill level of most people. If time is money, however, and yours is more valuable than paying to have the job done, then hire someone.

AIA Ninth Annual Exhibition

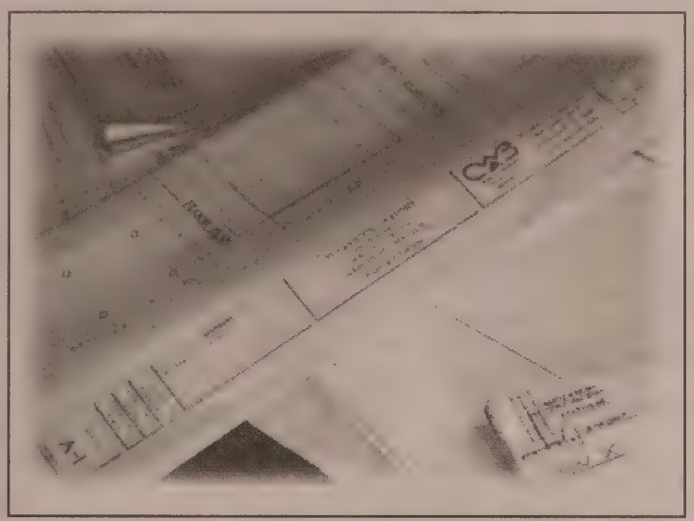
In this second home Mecca, known as 'The Hamptons' everyone covets ownership of an architecturally designed home. At the East End AIA's 'Ninth Annual Exhibition', local members exhibit their work for the public to some see some of their fashionably built projects. Diversity of architectural style and program content is apparent. Ann Surchin, an exhibitor, observes, "There are two thematically different trends on display. One expresses modern architecture showing terrific restraint and discipline, contrasted by a creative recasting to existing structures expressing a sympathetic eye towards traditional themes".

The reception received 100 visitors filling the rotunda. Mr. Ortiz, AIA President says, "It validates us, which feels good, in addition to the East Hampton Airport, especially Pat Ryan and the Town of East Hampton showing support, lending credibility to the efforts of our local architects, which goes beyond this venue". Riverhead Building Supply and Mike Roesel Builders facilitated the installation. Browsing among the professional and graphically rich displays is refreshing.

Speaking with several exhibitors and their clients, there was a solid sense of pride in the creative exchange and outcome. Sometimes, clients chose to build twice as big as originally planned based upon a thoroughly analysis of intent, mastered with forethought from their architect.

A project Mr. Ortiz displayed introduces a modernistic montage of strong geometric triangular and rectangular forms to an existing artist's residence. The shapes are defined and punctuated by brilliant primary colors that outline them. "A painterly place to work and swim," the components sit boldly in a lush manicured backdrop. Christopher DiSunno, a locally grown Architect reflects, "Using 3-D digital visuals for a 6500 square feet house, I let the definition of the harbor views be the the enduring force for the conceptual par tee. Important are the friendly relationships between scale and the surrounding environment in it's land-locked position, providing access mingled with layers of human involvement. The design tool is a series of photos and overlays responding to the area". Richard Sheckman, Architect of Montauk, humorously quips with a twinkle in his eye, "We are all participating in the noblest profession united by servicing the public".



Mr. Sheckman's Pool House project boasts playful proportions, reminiscent of rudimentary Caribbean countryside chapels sporting corrugated metal roofs. Here the materials are rooted in the Hampton-esque milieu. The steep pitched center entry volume uses white painted board and baton grid detailing punctuated by a celestially placed oval window over a pair of slender proportioned French doors. Two unadorned lower shingled side sheds flank this. The charming proportions are quiet and reverently scaled. Tim Dalton expressing his loyalty to Sag Harbor Architect, Ann Surchin, saying, "She listened... I had a list of numerous architects, of which Ann was number three. An hour interview lasted two, and I was hooked!"

James Merrell's modern context presents a simple juxtaposition of clean lined materials reminiscent of Louis Kahn. Flat silvery wood surfaces met by light toned stucco, grounded by tile grids. All of this underscores the influence of a studied eye. The arranged forms reveal picturesque vignettes, lots of light and a sense of repose. The exhibit is viewable at the Airport during operating hours from 8 a.m. until 8: p.m. through September 2nd. Bill Chaleff, Architect offers, "It's well worth it for people to find their way there to see it. The AIA has found new blood and spirit to rejuvenate their energies". There is a little something for everyone, as a way for the public to see what AIA services may dovetail succinctly with their immediate needs.

Eva Growney, Architect is a published member of the AIA, practicing on the East End and around the country. Ms. Growney is a European Honors Program graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design and has appeared on TV and Radio.

Where Luxury, Community and Tradition Meet

Peter Cooper Village and Stuyvesant Town (PCV/ST) make up a large rental community that has ranked among New York City's premier residential neighborhoods since its founding in 1947. The more than 80-acre complex has long been known as a distinct New York City neighborhood that offers a high quality of life, in a location convenient to bustling Midtown and the dynamic East Village.

In recent years a complex-wide renovation has occurred ensuring PCV/ST will continue to be a thriving residential community for years to come. And while PCV/ST's newly renovated apartments are among Manhattan's finest luxury rental offerings, the sense of community that has defined the rental complex since it opened more than a half century ago is still very apparent.

Located between First Avenue and the East River and running from 14th Street to 23rd Street, PCV/ST has more than 11,000 apartments spread among 110 buildings. Unlike any other rental offering in New York City, PCV/ST boasts ample open space and play areas spread evenly throughout the complex. With it's own dedicated full-time recreation staff, PCV/ST puts these common areas to good use. Summer concerts, holiday festivals, on-site daycare and an active senior center all help to foster the PCV/ST tradition of neighborliness and community.

"Living in this community is wonderful, especially with a family," said David DeGarmo, a Stuyvesant Town resident who shares a five-bedroom apartment with his wife and four young children. "We can take the kids to so many different playgrounds without even leaving the property. Two years ago, PCV/ST embarked on an extensive renovation program. Improvements are ongoing with many renovations complete. New glass-enclosed lobbies have been added to the buildings of Peter Cooper Village. The new lobbies feature dramatic entrances with granite floors, and improved access and egress for tenants and visitors, while succeeding at linking the buildings with their surrounding environment. The elevators in Peter Cooper Village have also been rebuilt with new, brass and marble-lined cabs and mechanical components designed to improve the level of service. Similar improvements are scheduled for Stuyvesant Town.

A new main entrance has been constructed on First Avenue and 22nd Street, improving Peter Cooper Village's streetscape and overall presence on First Avenue. This entrance features a state-of-the-art security station.

"We moved to New York City from a quiet suburb of Nashville so one of the greatest selling points for us was the safety of PCV/ST," said DeGarmo. "Security is top notch."

Another selling point, according to DeGarmo, was the recently renovated apartments. Hundreds of the PCV/ST's spacious apartments have been completely renovated, with additional units being completed each month. New kitchens have been installed with features that include granite countertops and stainless steel appliances. Marble bathrooms and updated plumbing and lighting fixtures add to the graceful style of the spacious apartments – mostly one-, two-, and three bedrooms – that are being rented from $2025 and up. A unique bonus value for New York City, air conditioning and all electricity costs are included in the rent. Additionally, all laundry rooms in Peter Cooper Village and Stuyvesant Town have been renovated with new finishes and new laundry equipment. With acres of landscaped common space, outdoor living has long been a major component of the PCV/ST lifestyle. Fifteen playgrounds, many of which feature designated areas for toddler play, have recently been renovated. Certain children's playgrounds have been built around different themes such as The River, The Village, The Harbor, The Train Station, and The Tree House. The complex also offers bocce, volleyball and basketball courts as well as jogging trails and paddle tennis. Often attended by PCV/ST recreation personnel, the play areas provide organized activities for both all residents.

While the playgrounds and recreation programs are proven to please residents of all ages, the centerpiece of the community is the Stuyvesant Town Oval, a large grassy space highlighted by spectacular landscaping and a dramatic fountain. The Oval, which hosts PCV/ST's popular summer concert

Executive Detailing

I know that it's the end of the summer, and hopefully everybody's car, truck, or anything with wheels is clean and shining. I am sure you all have car covers or garages, but for some reason, Mother Nature doesn't care and still blesses you with gifts from heaven- tree sap. By now I am sure it is hard as a rock and you're trying to figure out how to remove it, or if you need to have it removed professionally, but that's no fun and you're not reading this to call someone. It's relatively simple. All you need is clay and quick detailer's mist (which you should have).

Clay isn't what it sounds like, though it does somewhat resemble it. There are two types, blue and red, that you need to concern yourself with.

Blue is the only type you should get just now and it is sold at most auto body suppliers. While using the clay, you should try to work in direct sunlight or make sure the area is warm from sunlight. Take off a small piece of clay, fold it over so it covers your index and middle finger, and liberally spray detailer's mist over the area. This is the one time you get to use a lot – up to seven sprays. Take the clay and apply minimal pressure to the area, not too heavy and not too light. The clay should glide around the area and you should feel it catch each time you pass over the sap. It will take a while to remove. A nice extra advantage of the clay is that it will make the car even shinier than it is now because it removes contaminates from your paint like acid rain etching, and the clay is safe on clear coats. Since I'm not shopping with you, remember to read the package. Make sure it says clear coat safe. If you are scratching your head wondering if you have a clear coat or not, play it safe and assume you do, or just call me at 287-1168 and ask. The sap should come off without problem. Remember to read the instructions!! Finish with your micro-fiber towel. It's not necessary to re-wax the car, but you can if you wish. As always, you can reach me @ 631-287-1168 or e-mail me @ info@executivedetailingcorp.com

HOMEGROWN ...BY BRIAN HALWEIL

A Toxic-free Long Island

Most people would not willingly expose themselves or their loved ones to toxic chemicals. Parents lock cleaning supplies, bug sprays, paints, antifreeze and other domestic poisons behind cabinets or store them in sheds.

But vigilance often stops with the home lawn. Americans commonly expose themselves to some of the most toxic chemicals available to nonmilitary personnel when they spray—or pay someone else to spray—their lawn and garden. Children and pests roll in the stuff when they play in grass. The rain washes the same chemicals into our precious groundwater and wild areas.

Neil Lewis is beginning to envision a different future for Long Island. He points to studies showing a close connection between exposure to pesticides and higher rates of cancer, neurological dysfunction, and other ailments.

"The general goal is to reduce, and eventually eliminate, pesticide use on lawns and golf courses," explained Lewis, director of the Neighborhood Network, an Island-wide environmental group, at the kick-off fundraiser for the Campaign for a Toxic-free Long Island on August 1.

The Neighborhood Network focuses much of its attention on golf courses, encouraging links managers—through litigation and diplomacy—to use less synthetic fertilizer and to find nonchemical means for controlling pests. Most recently, the Network worked with the Sebonac company, which purchased Bayberry property in Southampton and plans to make it the first organic golf course in New York State. "We're not anti-golf, we're anti-pesticides used on the courses," Lewis said. He hopes that the Sebonac course could set the standard for the more than 120 golf courses across Long Island and put the region at the forefront of "organic golf."

"Our surveys have shown that people use golf courses as models for their lawns," said Lewis. "People want the putting-green look," he continued, uniform in color and species. Such a monoscape won't generally exist under natural conditions: herbicides help eliminate all but a single species of grass, and fertilizers push the tint of green to surreal levels.

Calls to several state officials, landscaper trade groups, and environmental organizations could not produce an estimate of the acreage of turf in Long Island. But everyone agreed that the figure must dwarf the 37,000 acres of farmland. Homeowners are responsible for a majority of the ten million pounds of dry pesticides (and an additional two million gallons of liquid lawn care chemicals) being applied to turf across Long Island on an annual basis. "Only arrogance can suggest that those ten million pounds of poisons aren't having an effect on our drinking water," Lewis noted at the campaign fundraiser.

The Neighborhood Network provides a listing of landscapers who can work without chemicals, and, for the last three years, has offered free "Four Steps to a Toxic Free Lawn" workshops in towns throughout Suffolk County. (The name of the workshops spoofs the popular and chemically-drenched four-step program advertised by lawncare giant Scotts.) A listing of organic landscapers and upcoming workshops can be found at the group's website, www.longislandnn.org.

"One of the most important and basic things, which everyone seems to neglect, is mowing higher," advises Beth Fiteni, the Organics Program coordinator for the Network. When cut no shorter than three inches, the taller grass shades out weed seeds and can develop deeper roots to better withstand drought. "If people just did that and added a good organic compost, those two steps alone would probably reduce more than half of the disease problems."

The result will be more colorful and varied than Astroturf, but the grass-as-healthy-ecosystem look is gaining cachet with cutting edge landscape designers. Fiteni also suggests that people seek out supplies and advice at sympathetic garden stores, like Marder's and Lynch's.

Among the Network's local allies is Amagansett Springs Aquifer Protection (ASAP), an Amagansett-based group that "puts on seminars showing people how to go organic in their own lives and does political activism to protect the aquifer," said Alexander Peters, who heads the group. Peters listed the East Hampton town dump and the B&C golf course as the top threats to the aquifer, still among the purest in the region. Tests have shown two toxic plumes emanating from the dump towards some heavily residential neighborhoods, and the chemical-intensive golf course (adjacent to the dump) sits directly on top of the aquifer.

At the campaign fundraiser, held at the American Legion Hall in Amagansett, Peters said that while the towns can't legally control what golf courses, homeowners and farmers spray, they can use the permitting process to favor chemical-free operations and they can set a good example. "There should be signs sticking out of town commons that say 'No pesticides are used on this ground." Peters said.

"Right now, cronyism and influence peddling prevents zoning and code departments from upholding state laws," Peters shouted to an audience of local activists and supporters. "No more!"

People interested in contributing to the campaign or getting involved should contact the Neighborhood Network (516-541-4321) or Amagansett Springs Aquifer Protection (631-267-8200).

Police Blotter

Scores of petty thefts topped the police reports this week, with the exception of a few big heists and the seemingly endless string of senseless vandalism.

A car dealership in Riverhead was looted of about $18,000 last Wednesday. Police say some unknown criminals entered the Route 58 property that night and stole two vehicles and some odds and ends, including two gear shifts and four seats. Police are still investigating.

Another Riverhead store was hit hard twice last week, first on Friday and then on Tuesday. The first break-in occurred Wednesday when someone broke a window and stole $2,500 worth of merchandise. Then on Tuesday, broke the front door and made off with an undisclosed amount of skateboarding gear.

A 16-year-old Hampton Bays boy was arrested and charged with petty larceny after he allegedly stole a bicycle. Police say the victim had parked his two-wheeler outside the Beach Bar on Foster Avenue in Hampton Bays and went inside. As he sat inside, the man watched the suspect get on his bike and proceed to pedal away. He ran after the boy for a couple blocks and lost him. Police soon found the boy and brought him and the bicycle back to the bar where positive identification was given and the arrest was made.

In Bridgehampton, an Edgewood Avenue man called police to report the theft of 6 of his crab traps stolen. The man told police that he had set 12 traps altogether in Mecox Bay, and since July 29, 6 went missing and the other 6 had been either emptied or damaged.

These crazy East End thieves really baffle me. If it ain't crab traps, it's decaying leaves...

In Amagansett last week, the operations manager of a local nursery witnessed a man in a red pick-up truck with a black lab in the back drive away with three bags of mulch that he hadn't paid for. The incident occurred last Saturday, but police have been unable to track down the man.

Employees of a clothing store in Sag Harbor called police on Wednesday after witnessing a 39-year-old woman stuff some clothing into her handbag and attempt to leave. Police arrived and arrested her on charges of petit larceny and criminal possession of stolen property.

At another clothing store in East Hampton, employees watched as a woman and her teenage son ran out with a white dress that hadn't been paid for. They were unable to capture the thieves, but police are on the hunt.

An Amagansett woman is upset about $200 worth of stockade fencing that was stolen from her Abram's Landing Road home some time since August 10. The woman told police that she was away for most of the month of August and doesn't know when exactly it could have happened.

A child care center in Bridgehampton is missing two Gateway computers. According to police, they may know who broke the window and took the computers and are still investigating the crime.

Southampton Town Police arrested a 17-year-old boy for criminal mischief in the second degree on August 14. Police say the Southampton youth stole a golf cart and damaged it while driving on Sebonac Inlet Road. The boys score on the back nine was unavailable as of press time.

Another 17-year-old was arrested last week. Southampton Town Police were investigating a burglary at a home on Goodrich Avenue in Riverside when the suspect showed up again. He was charged with first-degree burglary.

On Wading River Creek, Police are investigating the theft of an inflatable raft. The owner of the blow-up vessel valued the boat and oars at $150.

A West Lake Drive Montauk woman is missing three fur coats. She told police that only three people have keys to the house and there was no sign of forced entry. If caught, the culprit could face charges of grand larceny for the theft of the $10,000 worth of stylish pelts.

A Wainscott woman notified security at the Star Room when she realized her hand bag had been stolen.She told police that she had left it on a sofa for a moment and when she returned it was gone. Inside the bag were a few bank cards, a student ID card, a disposable camera and a about $100 cash.

A Middle Line Highway resident claims that someone drove a screw into her car's tire, costing her $250 to replace. She told police that she had found random screws and nails in her driveway before, but believes that someone intentionally ruined her tire.

A Noyac man was alarmed and probably a bit baffled when he discovered that someone had entered his residence on Millstone Road. The intruder apparently took a shower and "borrowed" some fresh clothing, including camouflage pants and two button-down shirts. He also told police that the thief took some family pictures off the refrigerator and about $7 worth of change from an unlocked car in the driveway before fleeing the scene.

WHAT A STINKER

Dear Dan,

Hi, I have been going to Sag Harbor to our family house since I was a child. I can't believe the change the Hamptons have gone through. No more is this town a quiet fishing village. No more clamming in the lake. Too many "Hampton's wannabees" turning this once quaint town into a sewer.

FROM THE GREAT WHITE NORTH

Dear Dan,

I have a house in Randolph, Vt. And I get the paper mailed to me.

The Herald had some nice writings about Howard Dean, so I sent your article to them.

I got the enclosed note in reply. Thought you would enjoy reading it.

DON'T LEAVE HOME WITHOUT AHMET

Dear Dan,

I read your portrait of Ahmet Ertegun with great interest and thought I should share the following experience with you.

In the early 1930s, while I lived in London, I attended the Lycee Fraucard there. One of my classmates was Ahgmet Enteguns' older brother, Munir. He was a brilliant student and I spent many after school hours with him and his friends, also sons of Turkish diplomats.

At the end of the school year, I moved back to Paris and lost track of Munir.

When I came to the US, however I saw the Ertegun name mentioned in the newspapers and magazines in conjunction with Atlantic records. But I did not contact Munir.

When, about 15 or maybe 18 years ago, I visited the island of Cyprus on the Greek side, I decided, avid sightseer that I am, to cross over to the Turkish side to have a look at monuments and the cathedral, named Hegia Sophia, like the one in Istanbul.

At the Greek border leading into no-man's-land, which separates the two countries, the guard admonished me that if the Turkish authorities stamp my passport and I am an American citizen – I will not be able to re-enter Greek Cyprus. This did not stop me from changing my plan and I took the ten-minute walk to the other side with sharp shooters watching me from observation towers. When I arrived at the Turkish border, I handed my passport to the official in uniform. He opened it and began turning the pages slowly, looking at the many visas I had accumulated over the years.

Watching him turning the pages slowly began to unnerve me and I was wondering whether my crossing over to the Turkish side of Cyprus was not fool hardy. But then I had a thought: "You know," I asked the official in uniform. "I went to school with a Turkish young man by the name of Ertegun."

No sooner did I pronounce the name, when the official looked at me, beaming. "Ahmet Ertegun, the owner of the Cosmos football team." "Yes," I said. I did not think I should correct him. "We read about him in our local papers all the time. He is our hero."

With that said, he handed me my passport (without stamping it!), asked his aide to call a taxi, instructed the taxi driver to show me around and when, two hours later, I passed him again on my way back to no-man's-land and the Greek side of Cyprus, he came to me, shook my hand and said, "Give Ahmet our regards. We think of him quite often."

Dan's Letters (continued from page 158)

I used to pull in to King Kullen (formerly in the Caldor shopping plaza, remember that?) there was a barbed wire fence around the King, filled with cows.

So why are you on a cow kicking crusade stating the Catskills are lowlier than the Hamptons are just because your sister found a cow roaming around her land?

The Hamptons has been overbuilt (can't bring back the land) over priced (no one is going to lower their prices to match the "real" world) overstressed and overstuffed with overfed bloatheads. It's not a passing fancy that former Hamptonites are seeking solace in the Catskills. I, for one, being one of them. It's just that up in the Catskills I can remember what the Hamptons used to be like! And I hope and pray I can get another twenty years up here (as I did in the Hamptons) before the bloatheads seek this place and destroy it too.

You're right. The Hamptons is so much better. I think you should stay there!

STACKING THE DECK?
Dear Dan:

My family and I have been vacationing on the East End for about 50 years now, (yes, well before Dan's Papers existed!). I was ten years old then, and we came out here with my parents, aunts, uncles, cousins, and friends. Now, we come out regularly with our children and grandchildren. Ever since you began to publish your paper we have read it regularly and enjoyed it. However, lately we have become distressed at what we perceive as your rather flippant attitude toward the Shinnecock plan to build a casino in Hampton Bays. Dan, you have tremendous power and influence in the East End, perhaps as much, or more than, any legislator. Your recent articles about the Shinnecock plans for a casino seem to be almost SUPPORTIVE of their plans. Surely you must know that, if approved, their casino would bring ultimate destruction to ALL we cherish on the East End. We all want the Shinnecock Nation to have greater economic well being, but NOT at the expense of what is unique to the East End. I urge you to take a strong stand against their casino plans. Thank you.

Rand Kane
Via e-mail

I'm sorta against the casino. –D.R.

TONG SHOPPING
Dear Dan,

Last Saturday, my husband and our houseguest from LA had some errands to run in town. One was to stop at the local hardware store to purchase tongs for the barbecue. While my husband, a true hunter (men are from Mars) was focused on the mission at hand, our LA friend was perusing the aisles, when somewhere between the varnish and sandpaper display, he felt two strong hands slide up his back and land on his shoulders.

"You see? Zee muscles in here are very, very tight. Me. I make you loose." He turned to find a tall, statuesque blonde he described as a cross between an Amazon woman and how he'd always envisioned a mermaid, handing him her business card, printed in full color, showing her and a girlfriend smiling with what appeared to be one very satisfied, male customer.

My husband thrilled with his new tongs, missed the entire incident and the playful repartee only an out-of-towner might guess was an everyday occurrence in the beautiful, lush and sometimes tacky Hamptons.

I ask you Dan, when and where does advertising become solicitation?

Sande Berger
Bridgehampton

HILLARY FOR PRESIDENT
Dear Dan,

I always thought Miss Hillary was a Senator. You demoted her to a Congresswoman (congressperson?) in this article.

M. Accardo
Via e-mail

P.S. Didja ever get that proofreader you were advertising for? You need one.

Miss Hillary was indeed dempted. Haven't you herd? – D.R.

JUST THE FACTS JACK
Dear Dan,

You need to do a better job checking your facts when you write articles that are supposedly historically correct. In this weeks paper, your story Hail to The Chiefs has some fairly significant errors.

Joseph P. Kennedy was the Ambassador to England during the Roosevelt Administration at the onset of World War 2. This would be the father of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, not the father of his wife Jacqueline Bouvier. It is quite doubtful that Mr. Bouvier was a Nazi Sympathizer in the least. I'm quite certain he passed away when Jackie was very young. If you look at the facts, Sir, Ambassador Kennedy was only guilty of making diplomatic errors in judging the ability of Hitler to conquer all of Europe and be on England's doorstep as quickly as he was. He was not a Nazi Sympathizer and not a pro-Hitler American. Joe Kennedy may have had some faults, but he was a true blue American, who became quite wealthy using capitalism to its utmost advantage in the 20's and 30's. You owe an apology to both the Kennedy family, and the Bouvier descendents for your accusations, and since many of them are 'locals' you probably should!

President William Henry Harrison was sworn into office on March 4 1841. He passed away one month later on April 4, 1841. He died at the time of what was referred to as "bilious pleurisy" from complications from several he had at the time. Contrary to your reporting, he did not die two days after taking the oath, but after a month of working at setting up his administration and getting it running. He also had a few raucous parties in the White House in his month in office, where the hard cider flowed andGeneral Harrison was a contributor to both the noise and the dancing. President Tyler who followed Harrison into office was called "His Accidency" at the time, and was surrounded by a hostile cabinet and congress. He was the youngest president ever, and had great difficulty winning over the American people, as he was the first Vice President to take over as President. Many government officials referred to him as Mr. Acting President, until Tyler put a stop to that. Lettitia Tyler died in 1843; a few months later he met Julia Gardiner, and married her. Tyler's love letters were actually tracked down in East Hampton's post office and read aloud to all at the Gardiner's household. Not much privacy in those days...

Now, as to your referring to the Hamlet of Manorville in the town of Brookhaven as a "lower middle class community not far from Riverhead" I find this statement to be insulting and typical of your South Fork egotistical ethnocentrism. I am not from that lovely rural village, but live in an adjacent community not far away. The only thing I find annoying ever about being in Manorville is on a Friday night, or Sunday evening, when your "Captains of Industry and Shakers of the Universe" as you so affectionately call them, block traffic for miles down CR 111, because they are to dumb to look on a map and go another way. I realize you wanted to slam Mr. Pelosi by belittling the town he adopted as his home, but bear in mind that homes in Manorville sell for 750,000 in many cases. Hardly a "lower class community" as you referred to it as. You must realize that people west of the Shinnecock canal read your paper, and have for many years. Don't insult our hometowns, our intelligence, or us!

LEGAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

At an IAS Term, Part 20, of the Supreme court of the State of New York, held in and for the County of Nassau, at the Courthouse located at 100 Supreme Court Drive, Mineola, New York 11501, on August 11, 2003. Honorable Sra B. Warshawsky Justice, In the matter of the Application of BARRY FORTUS, a holder of 50% of all outstanding shares of CHOICE DISTRIBUTION INC. entitled to vote in an election of directors, for the judicial dissolution of CHOICE DISTRIBUTION, INC. Index no. 11976-03 Hon- Warshawsky order to show cause. Petitioner against BRIAN SWEENY, Respondent. Upon reading and filing the affirmation of Thomas J. Mc Namara, duly affirmed the 1st day of August, 2003, the Petition of Petitioner, BARRY FORTUS, verified the first day of August, 2003, and the exhibits annexed thereto, it is ORDERED, that Respondent BRIAN SWEENY show cause at an IAS Part 20 of this Court, 100 Supreme Court Drive, Mineola, New York 11501, on September 23, 2003, at 9:30 a.m., or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, why an order should not be entered granting Petitioner the following relief:
(1) pursuant to Business Corporation Law S1104 (a), an order and judgment dissolving CHOICE DISTRIBUTION, INC,. on the ground that the directors are so divided respecting the management of the management of the corporation's affairs that the votes required for action by the Board can not be obtained, and on the ground that there is internal dissension and two or more factions of shareholders are so divided that dissolution would be beneficial to the shareholders;
(2) pursuant to Business Corporation Law S1115, a preliminary injunction enjoining and restraining Respondent from expanding any funds of CHOICE DISTRIBUTION, INC. for the payment of his legal fees and expenses incurred in connection with this proceeding;
(3) pursuant to CPLR 602 (a) consolidating, or ordering a joint trial,of this dissolution proceeding with the action pending in this court entitled FORTUS V. SWEENY, index No: 9676/03 which seeks the removal of Brian Sweeny as a director and officer of CHOICE DISTRIBUTION, INC. for cause pursuant to B.C. L. S706 (d) and S716 (c) the "Removal Action"), on the ground that the Removal Action and this dissolution proceeding present common questions of fact and law; and
(4) such other and further relief as may be just and proper.
ORDERED, that pending further order of this Court, both parties are enjoined and restrained from expending funds of CHOICE DISTRIBUTION, INC. for the payment of legal fees and expenses in connection with this proceeding; and sufficient cause appearing therefore, it is further ORDERED, that publication in compliance-with the provisions of the Business Corporation Law shall be made in Dan's Papers, a newspaper in general circulation in Suffolk County. and sufficient cause appearing therefore, it is further ORDERED, that service of a copy of this Order and Verified Petition with Index number and date of filing endorsed thereon, together with the papers upon which it is based, be served upon the respondent pursuant to SPLR 308 (1) or (2), the 10 day completion of service is waived, and all other interested persons, in the manner prescribed in BCL S1106 and upon the State Tax Commission, on or before August 13, 2003, be deemed good and sufficient service thereof. ENTER S. Warshawsky J.S.C.

All these pleasures and much more await you at Highland Estates! Ahhh...! This is the life!...

At the heart of the Catskill Mountains in the lovely town of Barryville in Sullivan County (dubbed "the new Hamptons" by Newsday July 11, 2003)" Highland Estates is a private community of custom log homes gently nestled on serene 3 to 5 acre mountain homesites. There are no "cookie cutter" homes here! Your home will be meticulously custom built to your specifications by outstanding craftsmen using the only the finest materials. It will be placed on its own land in such a way as to ensure its complete privacy. Furthermore, since we firmly believe in preserving the natural beauty of the landscape, each home is built to conform with its natural setting and with as little environmental impact as possible. The only things you will ever see from your windows will be those created by nature!

Move up to the serene country life you've always dreamed about and truly deserve! Several prime parcels are still available but availability is limited so please call today! Highland Estates...a quality community created by Mountain Partners.
